Appeals to Senators to Kill Chamberlain Resolve for Army Investigation

By International News Service.

Washington, May 15.—The differences of opinion between President Wilson and Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, chairman of the Senate military affairs committee, over the aircraft situation, brought forth another move from the chief executive today.

The President, in a letter to Senator Martin of Virginia, majority leader of the Senate, informed Congress that he would regard the adoption of the Chamberlain resolution as a vote of lack of confidence in the administration.

The Chamberlain resolution would clothe the military committee with broad authority to investigate all army matters, as well as the aircraft situation.

Senator Martin hastily summoned administration Senators to his office and read the President's letter to them. Lines were immediately drawn for a bitter fight in the Senate over the resolution.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER

President Wilson's letter to Martin follows:

"My Dear Senator:

"I am sincerely obliged to you for calling my attention to Senate resolu-

FOOD CONSERVATION CAMPAIGN IN ARMY

With the American Army in France, May 15.—Orders have been issued to inaugurate a food conservation campaign among the American forces. While the rations for the troops in the trenches or troops doing heavy manual labor have been increased, and there is no intention of reducing any rations, headquarters is determined there shall be no waste of any kind. Instructions issued today provide that an officer shall be present at every meal to test the food and to warn against overhelpings or throwing away useful foods.

DEMANDS GRANTED TO LYNN SHOE STRIKERS

The Shoe Manufacturers' Association of Lynn voted today to grant all the demands of the 500 striking shoe cutters in the various factories of the city and the operators returned to work this afternoon. Increases of from 20 to 25 per cent. were demanded in some lines of work and in others as high as one cent per pair. Under the new schedule shoe cutters will make from $30 to $35 per week and lining and trimming cutters will earn from $25 to $30 per week. The strike was started Monday.

NO AMERICAN SOLDIERS FOR MUNITION PLANTS

Paris, May 15.—The Bureau of Military Information today branded as false a rumor that American soldiers or workmen would be used to replace French munition workers sent to the battle front. The government has decided to place certain mobilized workmen at the disposal of General Foch, and certain classes of men, particularly those having seen long service at the front and those who have been wounded, are to be given especial consideration.

Official: Straw Hat Season on Today

The bell rang so loudly and clearly that man and beast heard it alike. Here are two of the pioneers.

Introducing Fred Clarke of Winthrop and "Maggie," the pride of the market district. When they met today they were dolled up in new straw bonnets, both coming under the wire as winners in their classes in the first day of the straw hat "open season." "Maggie" is owned by B. S. Cole of Merchants' row, who keeps "Maggie" right up to date on the fashion calendar.

The open season on straw hats began today officially.

A man can wear one now without fear of jibe that he is forcing the season.

So can a horse, too, for that matter. Fred Clarke of No. 30 Mermaid avenue, Winthrop, noticed that fact today. Fred came up from Winthrop under his new straw lid.

In the market district he spied "Maggie," wearing her new straw bonnet. "Maggie" is owned by B. S. Cole of No. 21 Merchants Row.

The straw hat wearers surveyed each other. Clarke laughed. "Maggie" smiled.

They speak of a "horse laugh." Why not a "horse smile," too.

DUTCH NAMED FOR THE WAGE BOARD

Governor Settles Long Controversy by Appointment of Winchester Man

Governor McCall today nominated Charles F. Dutch of Winchester to be a member of the Minimum Wage Commission.

The appointment is expected to settle the controversy which began last December when the Governor's Council, yielding to the influence of Channing Smith, a Leicester manufacturer prominent in the affairs of the Associated Industries, the group of capitalists who financed the campaign against the Initiative and Referendum, refused to confirm the appointment of Professor William Z. Ripley of Harvard.

When the State, as represented by the Governor's Council, turned down Professor Ripley, the Federal government quickly drafted him for service in winning the war. He was appointed Administrator of Labor Standards in Army Clothing and on Friday he informed Governor McCall that he could not serve on the Minimum Wage Commission.

Dutch was approved by Professor Ripley, Professor Arthur N. Holcombe of Harvard, who retires from the board, and by the Associated Industries.

He is a former town counsel of Winchester. Governor McCall made these other nominations today:

Charles J. Powell, Peabody, clerk of the Peabody District Court, vice John Connor, deceased; Carroll W. Doten, Cambridge, member Bureau of Immigration; Charles T. Copeland, Cambridge, trustee of the State library; Daniel J. Mullane, Chelsea, member of Chelsea Excise Board; Isaih Laplante, Fall River, member Fall River Board of Police; Ledstine Lincoln, Fall River, and Charles H. Adams, Melrose, members State Board of Charity.

All these are renominations, except that of Mr. Powell.

MRS. WENZ WINS $60,000 WILL CONTEST

Wife of Late Chocolate Manufacturer Awarded Decision After Several Years

Mrs. Mary Sullivan Wenz wins her long fight for possession of about $60,000 willed her by her late husband, Henry Wenz, chocolate manufacturer. The contest waged for several years by Frank Wenz, brother of the testator, having been abandoned, a final decree for the will has been entered by Judge Carroll of the Supreme Court.

Mrs. Wenz, as Miss Sullivan, was bookkeeper for her husband for many years. It was shown at the trial that her business ability enabled Wenz to make money.

Frank Wenz, who came here from Bavaria at the request of the testator, maintained that Henry had failed to carry out a promise to make provision for him in the will in return for work at the candy factory.

'NECESSARIES' BILL SIGNED BY McCALL

Cities May Now Deal in Food or Coal in Emergency to Curb Profiteers

Governor McCall today signed the bill authorizing the cities and towns of Massachusetts to deal in necessaries of life in times of war, emergency and distress or when the public exigency requires.

The legislation provides one of the most advanced steps taken by Massachusetts in recent years. It is aimed to prevent the exploitation of the people by high prices when foodstuffs are scarce. It is aimed against the food profiteer and the speculator. It is also intended to allow cities and towns to produce and to house foodstuffs and coal against the day of drought.

The bill provides the largest measure of home rule. Every city and town is allowed to determine for itself when the public emergency or exigency exists. It then can sell foodstuffs to its inhabitants. The idea is to sell the materials practically at cost.

Governor McCall used two quills in signing the bill. He gave one to Henry Sterling, legislative representative of the American Federation of Labor, and the other to Former Mayor Josiah Quincy of Boston.

HELD FOR BRIBE OFFER TO CAPTAIN OF POLICE

Charged with attempting to bribe Captain Richard Fitzgerald of the Joy street police station, Israel Segal, who runs a tailor shop on Howard street, West End, was in police court today. Segal was held in $500. Captain Fitzgerald on the witness stand stated that on April 27 on Beacon street, Segal tried to thrust a roll of bills into his hands. The name of the proprietor of a West End restaurant, whose liquor license was refused this year, was mentioned in connection with the case.

Monarchs Chosen at Conference for Lithuania, Esthonia, Courland and Poland

By International News Service.

Copenhagen, May 15.—Monarchs were appointed for the countries of Lithuania, Esthonia, Courland and Poland at the recent conference of the Kaiser and Emperor Charles of Austria at German great headquarters, it was stated in a dispatch received here today.

Liberal newspapers in Germany and Austria are dissatisfied because the conference was held without the sanction of the parliaments of the two countries.

The Austriane consider their position to be jeopardised industrially after the war, especially in the matter of obtaining foreign credits.

The new German-Austro alliance, entered into at the conference, is to endure for twenty-five years, according to dispatches from Vienna by way of Zurich.

Transport Sunk by Italian Warship in the Adriatic

By International News Service.

Rome, May 15.—Italian destroyers Sunday night sank an enemy transport in the Adriatic Sea near the entrance to Durazzo, according to an official announcement by the Admiralty.

The transport was convoyed by destroyers, but the Italian warships managed to return undamaged. The enemy destroyers were hit. Searchlights from the land played upon the Italian destroyers and made them plain targets, but the Austrian gunners failed to score a hit.

STATE APPROVAL FOR SERVICE FLAGS

McCall, in Message, Recommends Adoption of a Standard Emblem

"The State is a direct partner with any family that flies a service flag, and shares the joy, honor and sorrow of the family."

With that thought as the keynote, Governor McCall today sent a special message to the Legislature urging the official recognition of the service flags flying from so many American homes.

He also recommended the adoption of a standard service flag, devised by Assistant Secretary of State Herbert H. Boynton, to be as follows with stars on a white field: Blue star, for each person in the service; gold star, for wounds, distinguished service or death; gold star in centre of blue star, death; gold circle on blue star, distinguished service; red diamond at base of blue star, missing; red circle around blue star, captured; insignia above blue star, rank of man in service; gold chevron below blue star, one for each month in the trenches or zone of advance.

Rome, May 15.—The Austrians are massing large forces of men and guns in the Alps and along the Friuli plain. The enemy is endeavoring to conceal his movements by transportation at night, under cover of darkness. Austrian airmen are active, trying to prevent Italian reconnaissances.

NEW HIGH LEVELS MADE IN THE STOCK MARKET

New York, May 15.—Stock trading was active all through the forenoon, with vigorous advances in some cases to new high levels for the year, followed by short reactions. Baldwin Locomotive was the most prominent of the steel group, advancing 2¼ to 89¾. Steel common was heavily bought and moved up 1⅞ to 111¾. New Haven continued to reflect persistent accumulation, making a further advance of 1⅝ to 42¾.

Midvale Steel advanced 2¼ to 53¾ and other steel industrials made gains ranging from 1 to 2 points. American Sugar Refining advanced 2¾ to 116.

The copper stocks showed a better tone, with Utah advancing a point to 83¾, Anaconda was up 1⅛ to 69¾.

GERMANS PLANNING TO MAKE RUSSIA A HELPLESS DEPENDENCY

HUNS WOULD OCCUPY MOSCOW AND OTHER IMPORTANT SLAV CITIES

London, May 15.—The Russo-Finnish border is blocked with troops and a battle is imminent. There are concentrations of both the White Guards (pro-German forces) and Red Guards (Bolshevik troops) on the border.

By H. H. STANSBURY,
Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

Washington, May 15.—Conclusive evidence of Germany's purpose in Russia has been received here through diplomatic channels. The plan to organize the vast resources of the captured territory and convert the country into a political dependency has been set in motion.

Count Mirbach, German ambassador at Moscow, revealed the scheme in a formal note which has been delivered to authorities of the existing Russian government. The communication is said to have been in the form of an ultimatum.

It demanded in the name of the Kaiser that certain financial matters be immediately effected. Details as to the amount of money required and the manner in which it is to be raised are lacking. Comment communicated in the information reaching here was as follows:

"The proposal to govern financial matters would practically make Russia a German colony."

And this was only a small part of the German demands. The note insisted upon an immediate solution of questions, including an exchange of war prisoners, and complete abandonment of armaments and the dissolution of diary units recently framed.

WOULD OCCUPY CITIES.

The final proposal was accepted as completing the evidence of the Kaiser's purpose to completely dominate the Russian people and any form of government they may endeavor to maintain. Count Mirbach suggested that the agreement stipulate permission for the immediate occupation of Moscow and other large Russian cities by German forces.

The information relating to the German ultimatum reached the State Department through American diplomatic sources in Sweden, but was given out as unofficial, as the text of the note has not yet become available.

The ultimatum from Germany to Russia as analyzed here is but the fulfillment of the policy the Berlin Government is endeavoring to saddle upon all sections of the East which have been overpowered by the German military forces. That the attempt is being made so soon to carry out the plan in central Russia, where conditions are still greatly disturbed, is regarded as certain proof of the reported exhaustion of German resources.

URGENT NEED FOR RESERVES.

Haste in demanding the return of German and Austrian prisoners of war is positive of but one construction, it is declared. This is the urgent need of man power in Germany and of reserves for the Hindenburg armies which have been fought to a standstill on the western front.

A considerable number of German prisoners already have managed to get out of Russia, but have been pressed back into service. The men of this class were sent to munition factories rather than to the battle fronts through fear that Bolshevik propaganda might seriously affect the German soldiers. It is thought now that this precaution must be abandoned owing to the great need of German fighting men.

The German demand upon Russia for money is expected to take the form of indemnities to which additional sums will be added periodically as long as the war lasts. It is not put beyond the Germans to claim that they are fighting to protect Russia and therefore entitled to such financial support.

U. S. to Build Great Midvale Plant for Howitzers

Washington, May 15.—The government is to build a gigantic plant for the Midvale Steel Company, it was learned here this afternoon.

The location was not divulged.

WILSON STRIKES AT CRITICS IN SENATE

Asks Defeat of Chamberlain Resolution: "Lines Should Be Clearly Drawn"

tion 241, which in effect proposes to constitute the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate a committee on the conduct of the war.

"I deem it my duty to say that I should regard the passage of this resolution as a direct vote of want of confidence in the administration. The purpose which it undoubtedly expresses has been expressed again and again in various forms during the present session, and has always seemed to originate in a wanton distrust of those who are at present in charge of the executive functions of the government.

"Those executive functions are very clearly understood. They have been defined both by the constitution and by long experience and no one can doubt where the responsibility for them lies or what the methods are by which those who are responsible can be held to their duty.

URGES ITS DEFEAT.

"Such activities on the part of a particular committee of the Senate, as this resolution would look forward to, would constitute nothing less than an attempt to take over the conduct of the war, or at least to so supervise and direct and participate in the executive conduct of it as to interfere in the most serious way with the action of the constituted executive.

"I protest most earnestly against the adoption of any such action, and shall hope that every Senator who intends to support the present administration in the conduct of the war will vote against it. These are serious times, and it is absolutely necessary that the lines should be clearly drawn between friends and opponents.

"WOODROW WILSON."

President Wilson's letter effectually blocked immediate action on the Chamberlain resolution. It precipitated a wide breach in the committee on audit and control, which has charge of the measure, and a report was again held up.

THE BORGLUM DOCUMENTS.

Senator Brandegee of Connecticut has read into the record a letter from Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, announcing that he was mailing documents to prove the falsity of charges made against him last week.

"I think Mr. Borglum labors under a misapprehension as to my functions in this matter," said Senator Brandegee. "Consequently when I receive the documents I shall at once return them to Mr. Borglum, suggesting that he lay them before the Military Affairs Committee."

Senator Thompson of Kansas also says that he will return the letter to War Baker declaring that he was not, opposed to a most thorough investigation of the aircraft situation.

The letter follows:

"I have received your letter of May 13 inclosing a copy of Senate resolution 241, introduced by Senator Chamberlain, providing for the investigation by the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate of the progress of aircraft production and into any other matters relating to the conduct of the war by or through the War Department.

EVERY FACILITY OFFERED.

"I don't know how far additional powers are needed by the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate, and clearly the War Department could have no wish adverse to the most complete inquiry by the Senate Military Affairs Committee. I point out, however, that every facility which the War Department has is freely at the disposal of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, whether any additional authority is conferred by resolution or not."

KAISER LOVERS MAY LOSE CITIZENSHIP

Washington, May 15.—The cancellation of the citizenship papers of a German-born American citizen, reducing him to the status of an enemy alien, ordered by U. S. J., establishes a precedent that may be applied to any naturalized citizen who shows too much sympathy for the Fatherland, officials of the Department of Justice said today.

Germans Waiting for Better Weather Before Launching Big Drive

By FLOYD MacGRIFF,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, May 15.—The Germans are evidently awaiting better weather before re-opening their drive on the Western front.

There has been a heavy fall of rain, but despite it the bad weather the enemy has continued his preparations by re-arranging and re-massing men and guns.

There is evidence that German divisions are being withdrawn from Rumania to reinforce the armies on the Flanders and Picardy fronts. Amsterdam reported that already German cavalry from the Rumanian front had passed through Liege on the way to the Flanders front.

The German press has begun to prepare the populace for a series of battles in the subsequent heavy fighting. They no longer talk of "downing the allies by a single blow."

The Germans have received a severe taste of allied strength and have been warned what to expect when they again renew their offensive.

The heavy bombardments along both battle fronts have continued with unabated vigor, but the infantry operations are still confined to local operations, carried out with a view to bettering the various parts of the lines.

All the indications are that the German high command has taken alarm at the growing strength of the allies and is preparing for the next stroke with more care and caution than has preceded any German drive.

The inspired German press is speaking with a more subdued note about the offensive than at any time since it began on March 21.

General Foch's Success to Date Astonishes Former Opponents

By HENRY G. WALES,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, May 15.—The success so far achieved since the allied armies have been placed under the supreme command of General Foch is astonishing even to the warmest supporters of the generalissimo. Men who formerly opposed the plan to establish a unity of command are now praising the idea.

It is believed that the utter lack of friction and discontent anywhere is due largely to the timeliness of Foch's appointment. Almost simultaneously with his getting into the saddle the enemy's initial drive towards Amiens and the sea was stopped and deflected towards Flanders. And there, too, the generalissimo, as soon as he had time to extend his organization northward, accomplished wonderful results.

General Foch's successes have given the allies great confidence regarding the next blow that Hindenburg may contemplate. Foch has made it plain that he is not too proud to learn certain tactical lessons from the enemy, and he can be counted on to take advantage of everything that has happened.

AUSTRIAN EMPEROR UNDER GERMAN YOKE

veal the greatest historical development of three-quarters of a century.

According to the Frankfurter Zeitung, quoted in diplomatic dispatches received this afternoon, they are fourfold:

KARL NEEDS HELP.

Strengthening of the alliance; a military union, a customs union, recognition of the alliance in the national laws of each country.

These terms, diplomats say, require an organic union, not an alliance. They mean, to all intents and purposes, one sovereignty. They are comparable in strength by binding the two states together. They revive the old Germanic federation. But this time Berlin will be the capital, not Vienna, as she was previous to 1866.

Karl was forced to submit to these hard terms because of the many kinds of aid he requires from Germany. The question of the very existence of the Austro-Hungarian State has been raised, not from without, but from within. Karl needs the Germans to suppress his subject peoples. He needs them to help fight off Italy.

According to advices received here today, both kinds of aid have been promised. But in return Karl has agreed to complete Germanization of his empire. It will require a two-thirds vote of the Austrian Reichsrath to make effective his aims.

THIS IS HOW GERMAN U-BOAT BASE WAS 'BOTTLED UP'

This photo-diagram of the harbor of Zeebrugge, Belgium, given out by the British War Office, shows the exact positions of warships laden with concrete and sunk across the narrow canal out of which all submarines must emerge. They are not now emerging. Diagonally, almost at right angles, across the waterway, which was only a 25-foot channel in 1914, are sunk the Intrepid and the Iphigenia, obsolete cruisers. The Thetis didn't hit the mark, and is seen "sidetracked," at the extremity of the artificial channel. The whole canal is less than one-half a mile in length. The success of the operations was proved by photographs taken by British aviators after the raid.

ARTIFICIAL FOG WAS MADE BY U. S. SAILORS

London, May 15.—An Admiralty statement, giving details of the recent British naval action bottling up the entrance to the Ostend U-boat base, describes the invaluable aid rendered in the affair by American destroyers.

It was these speedy craft that disseminated the artificial sea fog screening the movements of the British war vessels and one of them took off the crew of the cruiser Vindictive after it had been sunk between the Ostend piers.

The only difference between artificial mist and the real thing is that the former lacks the dampness of sea fog. Incidentally, the statement says that no American naval observers were present at the operation.

Fliers Start From New York and Washington on First Venture of the Kind

The first letter put into any of the pouches was dropped by the President at 11:31 and was the signal for a mighty cheer from the throngs that had assembled.

Then the rest of the mail, consisting of 8,000 letters and packages, was made ready. Of these 3,300 were destined to New York, 800 to Philadelphia and 3,000 to miscellaneous places.

The whole weighed 123 pounds, representing a revenue, at 24 cents an ounce, of $472.32. It had been expected that the initial consignment would be in the neighborhood of 500 pounds.

The plane was of the Curtiss military trainer type, equipped with Hispano-Suiza engine.

Postal Airship Skims the Sky on Way From New York to Capital

New York, May 15.—Lieutenant Torey Webb of the aviation section of the Signal Corps, left Belmont Park, L. I., at 11:30 o'clock this morning, en route to Washington with the first consignment of mail to be delivered by aeroplane in this country.

The departure of Lieutenant Webb was witnessed by Postmaster Patten, Collector of the Port of New York Byron Newton, and other officials. Lieutenant Webb is due to arrive in Washington at 2 o'clock.

Under the authorization of Postmaster Patten the first letter to go into the mail bags was one from Governor Charles S. Whitman to President Wilson, urging the entire cooperation of the State of New York to raise $100,000,000 for the Red Cross next week.

The plane carried 350 pounds of first class mail, approximately 12,000 letters.

The machine used by Lieutenant Webb is a duplicate of the Curtiss design. As it started off its historic journey Byron T. Newton, collector of the port, cast aside dignity and waving his hat shouted enthusiastically: "Hurrah—the cloud line mail!"

MAN'S BODY STOPS FISHING BOAT'S MOTOR

An Atlantic Port, May 15.—Disabled by the body of one of the crew being caught by the engine's flywheel, the auxiliary fishing smack Dorothea B. of Boston was towed into portuefter she had been found in a drifting state, for hours before a tugboat sighted her signal of distress.

Walter N. Nolan, son of Francis Nolan, master of the craft, was oiling the engine during a storm when he was thrown against the machinery and his body wedged under the flywheel. He was killed instantly.

IDLE RICH AND "SOCIAL BUTTERFLIES" HIT IN ANT-LOAFER BILL

TO REPORT LAZINESS MEASURE

Greenwood Bill, Favored by Committee, Lays Penalty on All Loiterers

Make the idle rich work thirty-six hours a week.

Make the "social butterfly" fly to a regular job.

Send the chronic loafer to jail.

If you quit one job you must hustle for another, but the does not apply to strikes.

Habitual loitering on streets, in poolrooms, saloons, hotels, stores and so forth will be prima facie evidence of breaking this law.

Bill hits hoboes, "tange lizards," common loafers and the rich but lazy —all able-bodied males—alike.

The Greenwood "anti-loafer" bill for Massachusetts—one of the most drastic of the many new war measures—advanced a great step today. The legislative Committee on Social Welfare voted unanimously to report it.

The bill, in brief, authorizes the Governor, with the consent of the Executive Council, to issue a proclamation to require all able-bodied male residents of the State, from eighteen to fifty years old, to be employed at least thirty-six hours a week.

They must be employed in some useful and recognized business, profession, occupation, trade or employment.

Nobody who refuses to work thus will be guilty of a misdemeanor and liable to $100 fine, three months in jail or both.

GREENWOOD IS SPONSOR.

The bill will be reported by Representative Fred P. Greenwood of Everett, its author.

The police are only too willing to put into play the added powers that such a law, if passed, will give them in wrestling with the hobo and vagrancy and loafer problems. Police Superintendent Michael H. Crolye says:

"If this law is passed the Boston police will make a thorough round-up of all loafers. I think this law will be a great thing."

It will help particularly in rounding up and dealing with "slackers," who are dodging war service.

It will ferret out hitherto unfairly civilian slackers of two kinds—the professional tramp who is too lazy to hustle for a decent living and the rich man who refuses to do any work merely because on his money to support himself in idleness.

WEALTH IS NO EXCUSE.

The bill says that the fact that a man has income enough to support himself and his dependents shall not be a defence for idleness.

The bill makes allowance for the man out of a job who cannot find work, even in these super-busy war times. It is the duty of such a man to report his case to the State Board of Labor and Industries, giving his name, age, address and other data asked by the board. The board then, from its files of requests for this kind of help and that kind, will send the applicant to employers.

If John Smith reports himself out of carpenter work, if he is given directions where to get work and does not seek it, then the law will pounce on John Smith and have him in court.

MUST SEEK THE JOB.

A man securing work through this function of the State Board of Labor and Industries will be paid the regular wage or salary prevailing in that line.

If a man quits his job and does not try to get something else to do, he is violating the law, as proposed.

The bill makes it the duty of the police to send, daily, the names and addresses of men from 18 to 50 to whom this law applies.

But the law shall not apply to persons temporarily unemployed by reason of differences with employers. This provision is meant to take care of strike situations.

Nor shall it apply to students during school terms nor to persons fitting themselves for industrial pursuits, meaning apprentices.

Whether the exemption of students during school terms means that they are not liable under the law all through their school or college years, or whether the word "terms" is literal and they must work through vacations remains to be explained.

HITS ALL UNDESIRABLES.

Habitual loitering in idleness on the streets, at depots, in pool rooms, saloons, hotels, stores or other places shall be prima facie evidence of violation of this law.

That is where the law will hit the manicured gentry of the tango parlors, those who "hang out" there from daylight till dark, the "Knights of the Brass Rail," who make saloons their permanent headquarters, and similar undesirables.

A provision regarding cripples, which was recommended by the committee on war efficiency which is cooperating with the United States Public Service Reserve, was added to the original Greenwood bill.

This provides that a crippled man or one having any permanent physical handicap, who has no active trade, must register with the State Board of Labor and Industry, which has authority to provide training for him in some useful occupation to which he is adapted.

WHITE SLAVE CHARGE HINTED IN TRIAL OF GRACE LUSK FOR KILLING DOCTOR'S WIFE

The two women principals in the "Eternal Triangle" tragedy of Waukesha, Wisconsin. At the left is Miss Grace Lusk, on trial for murder. Her counsel declare she was insane when she shot Mrs. Mary Newman Roberts when the latter went to Miss Lusk's home to horsewhip her for attempting to force the wife from her own home that the middle-aged school teacher might marry Dr. David Roberts. A government agent's presence in court may forecast a prosecution under the Mann act. At the right is Mrs. Roberts.

By International News Service.

Waukesha, Wis., May 15.—The government stepped into the trial of Miss Grace Lusk when a special agent of the United States District Attorney took a seat in court and prepared to hear the tragic story of the romance that ended in the slaying by Miss Lusk of Mrs. Mary Newman Roberts, wife of Dr. David Roberts, the man both loved.

The appearance of the federal agent revived reports that Mann act charges may follow revelations in the case. The story of Miss Lusk regarding secret trips she says she took with Dr. Roberts to other cities had an especial interest for the government prosecutor.

It was also reported that Dr. Roberts would refuse to testify, claiming his constitutional rights, if he has been subpoenaed as a witness for the defence.

INSANITY THE DEFENCE.

In his examination of the talesmen, Henry Lockney of counsel for the defence repeatedly asked whether the contemplated jurors were prejudiced against a plea of insanity.

Dr. Roberts was in the courtroom, showing no emotion. Miss Lusk continually watched the man whom she has charged with the betrayal of her affections which led to the tragedy in which Mrs. Roberts lost her life.

A number of Miss Lusk's former pupils took the witness stand to testify that she was sane.

To correspondents Miss Lusk said when she is freed—she seems confident of being cleared—she will spend months of rest in her father's home. She told questioners she spent most of her time in the reading and writing of verse.

It is admitted that she killed Mrs. Roberts. The prosecution will allege that the crime was an utterly ruthless one—that she shot down Mrs. Roberts because the doctor's wife would not step out of the way, divorce the doctor and allow Miss Lusk to marry him.

Roberts had been infatuated with Miss Lusk for more than a year, but when it came to her demand that Mrs. Roberts be ousted and Miss Lusk put into her place as a legal wife, Roberts turned down the proposition.

Strange Life Story of Grace Lusk Seen in Her Trial for Murder

Waukesha, Wis., May 15.—All facts considered, it is without exaggeration to state that Miss Grace Lusk, now on trial for murder here, presents one of the most astounding characters ever brought to bar on such a charge. Following are the facts:

As a daughter in a cultured home her girlhood was blameless, sweet. She evinced a studious mind and became learned in psychology to the extent that she achieved a professorship in that science, as well as gaining a principalship at the Waukesha County Teachers' Training School. As a professor of psychology she lectured to the Waukesha High School, and was, therefore, in large degree, the moral mentor of the young persons of the newer generation of the city.

The character of her moral teachings was never criticised. Her social standing was of the highest, her position in public events important.

CAST AWAY GOOD RECORD.

Then of a sudden, she says she cast away all this fine record as worthless—worthless when weighed against a love which possessed her for a middle-aged man. And she herself middle-aged also—to be precise, forty-two!

But this intellectual woman of good social station declares she ruthlessly threw aside all barriers, all her former standards of life, when she fell in love with Dr. David Roberts. Because his wife wouldn't give the doctor up, because she wouldn't make a clear way for Miss Lusk to go to the altar with Dr. Roberts by herself clearing out of her own home and divorcing the doctor, the prosecution charges Miss Lusk with having a jealousy shot Mrs. Roberts to death.

It was in Miss Lusk's own home that the tragedy of Mrs. Roberts took place, the indignant wife of the doctor having gone there, it is declared, with a horsewhip which she laid on Miss Lusk's shoulders.

WENT TO WHIP RIVAL.

How Miss Lusk came into the possession of the revolver which she used with deadly effect on the wife of the man she loved, how she came into the intimate association, she alleges, with Roberts, the correspondence that passed between them, the letter she wrote to Mrs. Roberts the very night that Mrs. Roberts is alleged to have come to her home to whip her, her despair at the denial to Mrs. Roberts, her defiance of the police authorities by the use of the revolver until she could get into her bed chamber and turn the weapon against herself—these are thoroughly interesting chapters in a most interesting and frequently thrilling tragedy.

And now as she goes to trial, the prosecution is prepared to assert that in this letter she wrote to Mrs. Roberts, possibly the very night she killed her, but had not mailed, was the cold assertion:

"In the eternal triangle the only solution of the problem is the elimination of one character. The two who remain are those whose affections are mutual."

Her statement of their association as made from her cell follows.

STATEMENT FROM CELL.

"He came to see me and told me that he wanted advertisements written," she explained. "He said he felt the need of some one better than the usual advertising writer to describe properly the goods he manufactured. The work did not appeal to me at all."

"But finally I was convinced. He wanted me to work in his office right away. Then I refused to do. When I began writing, however, I found that it was necessary to be in touch with the office, so I went there.

"One of the stipulations I made was that the stenographer should be there while I was in the place. He agreed to this readily enough. In fact, he declared he wouldn't think of my being there under any other condition. Very soon, though, I noticed that he was using the stenographer out on long errands that left us alone. At first it seemed reasonable that the stenographer should be sent out.

"When I look back on it now it is all clear. When the stenographer used to go out he'd go right ahead with the work, then at the end of the while he began to speak intimately to me of his home life. He told me of the differences between him and Mrs. Roberts.

"In the end I found myself giving him sympathy. I tried to console him. He told me he was ready to leave his wife and that he needed some one who was sympathetic to help him in his business. And that is how it all happened."

American Flier and Observer Fall to Death in France

By Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

With the American Army in France, May 15.—An American observation plane fell through the clouds northwest of Toul and dashed to earth a mile inside our lines, killing the pilot and observer. How the plane happened to fall is not known.

Flying over the lines, the plane was heavily fired upon by German "archies" and it then ascended back of a fleecy cloud. A few minutes later our observers on the ground saw the plane suddenly come tumbling through. One of three things happened, an accident causing the machine to collapse, a stray piece of shrapnel happened to hit it or a German aviator "sitting" back of that cloud attacked it and sent it crashing down.

SEAMAN LOSES IN SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Judge Declares There Was Connivance Between Walton and His Mother

The divorce sought by William R. Walton, a seaman in the navy, from Anna L. Walton, naming a seventeen-year-old corespondent, was today refused by Judge Hammond in the Superior Court.

Judge Hammond stated that he did so because of connivance on the part of Walton and his mother, who conducts a lodging house in the South End.

Walton based his action on the fact that he discovered his twenty-two-year-old wife in a darkened room with seventeen-year-old William E. DeWitt of Stoneham.

Arguments on the question of dismissing the libel, together with the matter of support and domestic relations, will be heard tomorrow.

Walton testified that he and a detective listened by means of a dictaphone to a conversation between his wife and De Witt, recently a pupil in the Somerville High School. They then entered the room, he said and found Mrs Walton in company with the youth, while the gas was turned out

WIFE WAS LONELY

Mrs Walton testified that DeWitt had called on the suggestion of her mother-in-law, to prevent the younger woman from becoming lonely She said that they went in to see the baby and that the gas went out when she attempted to turn it low She said there were no chairs and as DeWitt was there both sat down on a couch.

Judge Hammond said:

"It is a clear case. The libelee was discovered in a situation in which it may be fairly inferred she was guilty of indiscretion, but I do not think it necessary to admit a finding as to that fact.

"However, the evidence clearly shows a situation connived in by others.

"The husband comes home unexpectedly and discovers his wife sitting in a darkened room with the light out. His suspicions are aroused and he consults his mother, Mrs. Biggs.

JUDGE DEFENDS GIRL WIFE.

"The young wife and mother was a mere school-girl—of little experience —only recently out of high school. Her husband had not suspected his wife of improper relations up to that time. He did not accuse her of unfaithfulness. His suspicions were newly aroused.

"But the mother did not advise her son to admonish his wife nor did she speak to the younger woman concerning the matter. There was no suggestion made to show Mrs. Walton the error of her course.

"Instead, the mother and son hired a private detective to place a listening device at the head of the bed in the young woman's sleeping room. The wires were concealed and led to a room occupied by a lodger at the Biggs home.

"Next, the mother hears Mrs. Walton make an appointment with the young man for an evening and from the detective the deduction that the appointment is for improper purposes. He then telephones for her son and the private detective to be at the house at the time of the appointment.

"Together they go into the room of the lodger where the listening device is located. Preliminary to their all night vigil and before the arrival of the young man, Walton locks the door of the reception room and parlor, with the evident intention of making it impossible for the wife and her paramour to meet in any room except the two which they occupied—one a room where the dictagraph was located.

SAYS DOORS WERE LOCKED.

"It is of no significance that the wife did not try the locked doors and windows of her cabin into her apartment. The significant thing is that the husband locked the doors that the wife might not be subjected to diverting, tempting and assisting his wife into the situation in which she was to fall.

"Mrs. Walton was a light-headed, inexperienced young mother who had been subjected for the first time to this terrible temptation. The situation in which she was discovered is for the chief affair of this court.

"I rule that there was connivance on the part of the husband and his mother and that the libellant is not entitled to a decree."

U. S. BOY SCOUT OFFICERS HELD FOR U. S. JURY

Scored by Commissioner Hayes for Wearing Uniforms Like Those of the Army

By JOHN W. ENGLISH.

The United States Boy Scout was denounced today by United States Commissioner Hayes when he held Major Willard E. Wood and other officers of the organization for the Grand Jury on charges of wearing uniforms similar to those of the United States Army in violation of the law.

Wood is New England commander of the United States Boy Scout and, with other officers, was arrested last week by order of Assistant United States District Attorney Judd Dewey.

Commissioner Hayes said the effect of the uniforms was to deceive anybody not entirely familiar with uniforms of the United States forces.

"If you want to adopt a uniform," he said, addressing himself to the officers present, "adopt one that is absolutely different."

MUST DISCARD MARKS.

Mr. Dewey called the commissioner's attention to the fact that several of the two dozen or more boys in court to hear the proceedings were still wearing uniforms with marks indicating they were corporals and sergeants. He requested the commissioner to instruct them to discard these marks. Charles Smith, counsel for Wood and the other officers, said he would see that the distinctive marks were removed.

Commissioner Hayes praised the Boy Scouts of America and its methods. The two organizations are affiliated in any way.

Major Wood's wife, known to the boys as "Ma," was in court during the proceedings.

The other officers held for the grand jury were Captain Edward P. Smith, St. Botolph street; Captain Max Davis, Walnut street, Roxbury; Lieutenant Raymond E. Fraser, Columbus avenue, step-son of Major Wood; First Lieutenant Howard E. Garis, Beverly street, Jamaica Plain. Major Wood lives on Main street, Winchendon, but during his activities in Boston has roomed on Columbus avenue.

Later during the men for the grand jury Commissioner Hayes said:

"I have noticed that the uniforms worn by the boys and that on the cars there is this device which is worn also by officers in the United States forces in the Aviation Corps. I think the whole effect of this uniform was one that would deceive anybody unless he were extremely familiar with uniforms.

SEES DECEPTION IN TITLE.

"Glancing at a man with this cap in the distance I must say that I was deceived myself and wondered what new branch of the service it was. This is not a military order in any sense, but the adoption of the title in my opinion is entirely wrong. The adoption of the title of a major is wrong.

"I understand the Boy Scouts of America uses the proper word, as 'Scout Master' or 'Patrol Leader' or something of that kind, to signify that it is not of military character. I must say that it seems to me that the very name is likely to deceive, in calling it the United States Boy Scout.' How that came about I do not know, but that is certainly not the case to me that the uniform which is adopted by the United States ought not to be followed by anybody by marks of rank, or any designation by which they can be called or considered as belonging to the United States service. It should be different in every respect.

BELONGS ONLY TO ARMY.

"There was a device on the sleeve of the uniform, a device which is used by a major. It was changed slightly, but nevertheless that was the device worn by Major Brooks in the army. The device upon the cap was different and it is the device worn upon a leader, but nevertheless it was enough for the ordinary person who is used to be deceived by it—deceived by it.

"The distinctive marks of rank and the colors adopted by the boys in the Army and belong to the United States. That was the thing which shocked me, and I did not want to adopt a uniform, adopt something that is absolutely different, absolutely different in every way and sense, both in color and style. Adopt different names for your officers."

Sits in Front of Train and Is Hurled to Quick Death

Burlington, Vt., May 15.—A man believed to have been W. R. Lane of Mount Holly, sat on the railroad tracks for an hour at East Dorset until a high-speed train came along and killed him. He was about 40 years of age.

At 4 o'clock several persons saw a stranger coming down the tracks a short distance from the station. He sat down and amused himself by idly tossing pebbles down the embankment.

Little attention was paid to the wanderer, and he was forgotten until the noise of an approaching train was heard. While the spectators looked on, the man calmly arose, seated himself on one rail and gazed dreamily into the distance. Before the engineer could stop the train, the locomotive tossed the man down the embankment. He was instantly killed. Papers found in the pockets gave the name.

ENEMY PATROL IS ROUTED BY YANKEES

By BERT FORD,
Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

With the American Army in France, May 15.—A German patrol of twenty men was encountered by an American patrol on the Picardy front and a sharp fight ensued as a result of which the enemy was routed.

Enemy machine guns and artillery emplaced around the village of Centigny swept our front lines but did no damage. The Germans made limited use of their trench mortars and searchlights during the night but their artillery activity was below normal. Some enemy shells fell into the American sector.

Much activity has been noted in the German lines. The enemy was observed to be busily engaged in digging in and strengthening his wire entanglements.

A bright Summer sun warmed the American front, dried the mud and quickened the enthusiasm of all ranks.

WILSON PLEDGES HIS HELP TO SUFFRAGE

Women Are Now Ready to Renew Fight for the Anthony Amendment

By International News Service.

Washington, May 15.—"I will do all that I can."

This is the promise that President Wilson has given to the women of the United States who seek the vote and who asked his help in obtaining it immediately.

Following the President's declaration, the suffragists, undaunted by their recent failure to force a vote in the Senate, trained their batteries at once upon that part of Congress.

They were very active and predicted they would make a powerful drive to have the Susan B. Anthony amendment considered at an early date.

The Presidential promise came during a conversation at the White House. Although Mr. Wilson had already announced his support of suffrage the women were much elated and termed this his "first public personal pledge."

RECEIVED BY PRESIDENT.

Mrs. Arthur Kellam of New Mexico and Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles of Delaware, headed the group of women to whom President Wilson gave this promise. With other members of the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defence they were received at the White House by the President and Mrs. Wilson.

Mrs. Hilles is a practical war worker. After campaigning in Delaware for the Liberty Loan in her capacity as State chairman of the National Woman's Party, she has gone to work in the Bethlehem Steel plant as a munitions maker.

As she was greeted by the President today she said to him:

"Mr. President, it really is a great inspiration to all of us in our war work if you would help forwards with immediate enfranchisement."

ASKS FOR WILSON'S HELP.

Directly behind Mrs. Hilles was Mrs. Kellam. At once Mrs. Kellam said:

"Mr. President, we women of the West are growing very restless indeed in asking for the long-delayed passage of the federal suffrage amendment. Won't you help us to secure the recognition of enfranchisement?"

"The women of New Mexico and many other States have no redress except through the amendment and they are eagerly waiting for action in the Senate; will you help us?"

"I will. I will do all that I can," replied the President, to the delight of the suffragists, with marked cordiality.

Suffrage workers said that with the Presidential support behind them and their appeal to Congress, they could do to bring immediate action, the prospect was bright.

ARREST RUSSIAN TRIO ON CONSPIRACY CHARGE

New York, May 15.—A charge of conspiring to overthrow the American government has been lodged against three alleged Russian anarchists, it was learned today in the bomb and neutrality squad.

They described themselves as Leon Rubkin, Ivan Novikoff and Alexander Derwach.

Several thousand copies of a pamphlet containing Anarchist propaganda of a pronounced character were seized, according to police headquarters.

The pamphlets were to have been sent for distribution to anarchist organizations in Detroit, Pittsburgh, Baltimore and Rochester, N. Y., from whence they were to have been distributed in an endless chain, suggesting a revolt all over the country.

Novikoff admitted printing the pamphlets, it is said. Novikoff and Berwach, according to the police, had been affiliated with Lenine and Trotsky. In Novikoff's possession was discovered a list of contributors to the I. W. W. defence trial in Chicago.

Baylies Brings Down His Ninth Enemy Aeroplane

Frank Baylies, the New Bedford youth who was yesterday credited with having brought down his eighth German aeroplane, has today increased the number to nine, according to an official dispatch from Paris.

When he tried to enter the United States Aviation Corps he was rejected for "defective vision," and is therefore flying with the late Captain Guynemer's "stork squadron," of the Lafayette flyers.

He entered the "big party," as he terms it, three years ago, as an ambulance driver, but found that too tame.

"My hands stay pretty, now"

No need to have rough, red hands if you wash them the right way

"My hands used to get so red and cracked from housework. Sometimes they would actually smart with pain.

"Now they stay smooth and lovely all the time."

Every woman has trouble keeping her hands in good condition. Housework, especially, is so hard on them. Fine particles of dirt and dust get ground into the pores and tiny furrows of the skin. Unless properly cleansed, these impurities irritate the skin—coarsen its delicate texture—redden the hands.

When you wash them with Lifebuoy, its rich, creamy lather not only cleanses thoroughly, but it carries into the pores a most healthful antiseptic.

Protects your skin—keeps it healthy

Modern health authorities are teaching the value of prevention. Keep your health, they say—take care of yourself while you are well—prevent sickness.

The skin, especially, needs daily protection. Through its millions of pores it is constantly throwing off perspiration acids —picking up dust and dirt from the air. For this reason alone the hands should be washed often, and always before meals.

The antiseptic in Lifebuoy affords just the protection your skin needs. This antiseptic, carried into the pores, soothes and softens the skin—helps to restore its smooth, delicate appearance—keeps the hands lovely!

Use Lifebuoy every day—see how its big, cleansing lather keeps your hands smooth and lovely—how it makes your face glow with health! Bathe with Lifebuoy, too—see how it stimulates and refreshes the skin! Nothing like it!

The odor tells you why

The "health" odor in Lifebuoy is found in no other soap. It is not a perfume—not the odor of a medicine—but a pure, hygienic odor that tells you why the soap benefits the skin. One whiff of Lifebuoy and you realize why it cleanses so thoroughly—why it purifies and protects—why it improves your skin.

Get a cake of Lifebuoy at any grocery or drug store. Just try it—and watch your skin improve.

3,000 MORE BAY STATE MEN CALLED

By International News Service.

Washington, May 15.—Two draft calls aggregating 51,800 men are issued by Provost Marshal General Crowder. Only white men are included in the calls. They are to be sent to recruiting depots to be drawn upon to fill vacancies in units already organized.

Local boards are instructed to induct under these calls only such registrants as are qualified for general military service.

The movement of the first portion of these men, 25,800 will begin on May 20 and be completed May 24. The second 25,800 will entrain on May 29 and the movement to camps is scheduled to be completed June 3.

The States from which the men in the first 25,800 are to come and the camps to which they are to be sent include New York, 5,000 to Fort Slocum, N. Y.

The States and camps in the May 29-June 3 call include:

Maine, 500 to Fort Slocum, N. Y.; Massachusetts, 3,000 to Fort Slocum, N. Y.; New Hampshire, 200 to Fort Slocum, N. Y.; New Jersey, 500 to Fort Slocum; Pennsylvania, 2,700 to Columbus barracks; Ohio, 500 to Fort Sevier, Ga., and 500 to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.; Rhode Island, 500 to Fort Slocum, N. Y.; Vermont, 200 to Fort Slocum, N. Y.

With these calls, the aggregate number of draft men ordered into military service during May is approximately 680,000.

The June quota, it was said at the War Department, is not expected to be quite as large as the May movements.

BRITAIN READY TO DISCUSS EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS

By International News Service.

London, May 15.—In the House of Lords Baron Newton said the reason why Great Britain had not hitherto exchanged prisoners was not due to callousness on the part of the government, but that it had the view of the War Office, the Admiralty and the Cabinet "that the more we exchange the longer we prolonged the war."

The agreement just reached between France and Germany, the speaker added, was of far-reaching character for the exchange of all prisoners. The number involved is 230,000, he said. This, he added, completely altered the situation, and he was now authorized by the War Office to say that in view of the French agreement the British government was prepared to consider the question anew.

350 TAKE LAND FOR CITY WAR GARDENS

More than 350 war gardens in Franklin Park, consisting of one-eighth acre each, have been assigned by the Food Production Committee of the Public Safety Committee, who are conducting the Municipal Gardens this season.

Mayor Peters will officially open the season on Saturday—already designated as Planting Day. The exercises will open at nine o'clock on Circuit Drive, south of the Refectory, on the golf links.

At this time the Mayor will turn the first soil and plant some potatoes. George B. Johnson, president of the R. H. White Company, who is chairman of the Food Production Committee, and Victor A. Heath, chairman of the Public Safety Committee, will also assist the Mayor.

CLAIMS DIVORCE SUIT PLAN TO RUIN HER

New York, May 15.—H. Austin Thompson, who directed the real estate development of the Gedney Farm section of West Chester, has sued his wife, Lina, for divorce. Charles E. Long, Supreme Court clerk of West Chester County, is named in the papers. Mrs. Thompson declared last night that a counter suit for divorce would be filed at once.

Mrs. Thompson said: "An attempt has been made to frame-up a divorce case against me. Mr. Long has been my attorney for six months. I will fight this case for my honor and my boy. It is a conspiracy to ruin me socially and financially. My attorney, Mr. Long, is high in political circles and this is part of a plan to ruin him."

Forecaster Smith said that temperatures would drop to between 40 and 50 degrees above zero.

He said that 20,000 women had been widowed and 19,000 children made orphans by deaths of soldiers in that division alone. Chaplain Cabanel is recovering his sight, which was lost to him for three months after being "gassed." He has served throughout the war and has been decorated with the Cross of the Legion of Honor and the Croix de Guerre. He declared that the allies were engaged in a holy war, not one for profit. He spoke under the auspices of the Newton branch of the Allied Relief Association.

CITIZENS ARE OFFERING HOMES FOR HOSPITALS

Patriotic citizens of Greater Boston are offering their homes as hospitals for wounded soldiers, according to a statement of Colonel Paul F. Straub, department surgeon of the Northeast.

"This shows a splendid spirit," remarked the Colonel. "Almost every day some one comes with this kind of an offer. But touching to read the letters from people who are willing and anxious to make some sort of a sacrifice for the boys.

"Nothing definite has been agreed upon, but when the need is made known I have no doubt the responses will be more than we require."

DRESS SIMPLY IN CHURCH, SAYS BISHOP

Newark, N. J., May 15.—"Our women must forget their special position and dress so simply in church as not to make other women uncomfortable," said Bishop Edwin S. Lines today in his annual address to the Diocesan convention of the Episcopal Church. "Women who can never think of anything but their social position are a great blessing in a parish. Snobbery is not only unchristian, but it is against the spirit of our people. It will do the church harm."

Previous to the death of Dr. Hyde, Mr. Sills was elected acting president at Dr. Hyde's request.

DOCTORS NOT EXEMPT FROM LAW OF ROAD

New York, May 15.—"The rights of a physician answering an emergency call, on an errand of mercy, or to relieve pain, are no greater than the rights of the driver of any other automobile in this city." Supreme Court Justice Goff charged a jury to this effect in the action by Mrs. Mary Jennie Graham against Dr. Louis Jameson for $5,000 damages. The doctor admitted his automobile knocked Mrs. Graham down, but said he was answering an emergency call. The jury awarded Mrs. Graham $1,200 damages.

In response to a request from Y. M. C. A. officials at Camp Devens, Mrs. Zabelle Panosian, the well known Armenian lyric soprano, will give a second concert for the soldiers on Friday, May 17.

The first concert, given by the young singer on April 15, met with such success that it was decided to give the second in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium at Camp Devens in order that more soldiers might enjoy it.

Mme. Panosian, who has devoted her time and talents to the entertainment of the soldiers since the beginning of the war, pays all expenses connected with the concert with the exception of the salary of Nicola Oulukanoff, Russian baritone, who is contributing his services. Besides M. Oulukanoff, Mme. Panosian will be assisted by J. J. Gilbert, flutist, and Miss Nora J. Norman, accompanist.

Filene's
"It can't be done." We proved it could
A MAN went into a New York store recently and asked whether he could have goods sent to his son in the trenches. "It can't be done," was the answer. "But it is being done by a Boston store," he replied. Still they continued to shake their heads.
He tells us that he went to several stores and everywhere met the same answer, "It can't be done," and it was not until he came back to Boston and called at Filene's that "IT COULD BE DONE."
As a matter of fact, the Filene Paris Shopping Service is practically the only way of sending goods, tobacco, candy, cigarettes, books, socks, and other things to soldiers in France.
The Filene Paris Shopping Service for soldiers makes it unnecessary to get regimental commander's O. K. It eliminates all transport across the ocean. We buy the goods in Paris, using our expert Paris shoppers, and ship from there. Call at Personal Service Bureau here in Boston.

SCREEN MAKER LOST BIG SUM THROUGH WAR

Three Wills Made by Burrowes Disallowed as Result of Contest

Portland, Me., May 15. — That the late Edward T. Burrowes, wealthy manufacturer of window screens and parlor billiard tables and reputed a multi-millionaire, lost vast sums of money owing to the war, was brought out at the hearing before Judge Charles L. Donahue in the Probate Court, to determine which of three wills made by him will be admitted to probate.

His widow, Mrs. Frances N. Burrowes, took the stand and told between sobs how her husband sent for her when he was a patient in the Garfield Hospital in Washington last February, and informed her that he was worried about his financial affairs, and would be unable to carry out the bequests made in his earlier wills. He then drew up another will, Miss Dora Putnam writing it at his dictation.

DISALLOWS THREE WILLS.

After an acrid debate between attorneys and a series of severe cross-examinations Judge Donahue disallowed all three wills, thus leaving all the property to the family. It is likely that an appeal will be taken by contestants.

The last will was dated February 22, 1915, but was disallowed at once by Judge Donahue without opposition of counsel from any of the interests represented, because the testator, when he returned to this city later tore out his signature, declaring it was "no good," and that he would make another will. He died before that was done, and David W. Snow, representing the family, contended that despite the fact that the testator revoked it, this will invalidated two other wills made in 1913 and in 1917.

The real contestant of the will was Mrs. Mary H. Magruder, widow of the late Rev. J. W. Magruder, an eminent Methodist divine, at one time pastor of the Chestnut Street Methodist Church, of which Mr. Burrowes was a deacon. Dr. Magruder was made residuary legatee in the will made in 1917. The clergyman fell dead in a telephone booth recently in Brooklyn, N. Y., and by reason of his death Mrs. Magruder claimed to be the beneficiary of what her counsel declared was the only valid will.

Clinton B. Burrowes, a son of the dead millionaire, testified that his father sent for him March 12 of this year and asked him to get the 1917 will, which was in the safe of his attorney, David W. Snow. The son said his father told him that he wished to destroy the will and make a new one, as he had lost a lot of money due to the war, and would not give so much to charity as was planned by him in that will.

"When I brought the will next morning," continued the witness, "my father was unable to talk with me. He was in a stupor which lasted until his death."

HE DARKENED HIS GRAY HAIR

They Used to Call Him Grandpa; Now They Call Him Kid.

Tells How He Did It.

Mr. J. A. McCrea, a well known resident of San Francisco, who was called Daddy and Grandpa on account of his white hair, and who darkened it with a simple home-made mixture, recently made the following statement:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken gray hair and make it soft and glossy. To a half pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ½ ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. My friends now call me 'Kid.'"

Get a Job, Stick to It and Help Win War, Says Stevens

Get a job and stick to it to help win the war!

My advice to true patriots is to stick to their jobs.

This habit of looking for better jobs is slowing up production. Changes of labor create unrest, and result in the employment of men to places for which they are not fitted, necessitating further changes, and causing the loss of valuable time.

Men who can qualify for high wages are men highly skilled in some certain line of work, and not not the type of men who are drifting from job to job, ever in quest of better places. There should be an organized effort to instruct men who have positions to stick to them. The standard of wages is high in all lines of work. Everyone's motto should be: Get a job and stick to it to help win the war.—Herbert A. Stevens, New England District Superintendent of the United States Employment Agency.

PATRIOTIC PUNCH LANDS PETER SABA IN COURT

Brockton, May 15.—Peter Saba, of Elliot street, told Judge Warren Reed before whom he was taken today on a charge of assault and battery, that he was second in his patriotism to no man, and that when Mike Assaka, one of his countrymen, refused to buy a Liberty Bond, he first scornfully reminded him of it and then punched him. Saba drew an American flag, five by three feet, from his coat pocket and waved it in the courtroom while announcing that it was good enough for him. He said Assaka had $4,000 in the bank and refused to buy a bond of him while he was acting as chairman of a Syrian committee. Judge Reed placed the case on file.

KILLED BY SHELL AS HE FACES OFFICER

Boy in Ammunition Train Crew Meets Death That All Drivers Are Facing

By BERT FORD,
Staff Correspondent of International News Service.

With the American Army in France, May 15.—Lieutenant Spencer Tunnell, of Knoxville, Tenn., narrowly escaped death on a shell swept road in Picardy, when, on duty on an American ammunition train, he passed through a rain of shrapnel unscathed. Private Rudolph Sima, nineteen, was instantly killed a few feet away.

That illustrates the hazards of the American ammunition crews. Tunnel said to me today:

"The fellows in the trenches deserve all the praise and respect they get, for though going through mud and gas shells and bullets. But the chaps who take the supplies and ammunition to the front ones at night face death at every turn of the wheels. There's all gamesters, whether in the trenches or at the wheel of an ammunition truck.

A REAL GUNGA DHIN.

"Take the case of Young Sima. He joined the regulars at sixteen. He has no parents, no relatives. After his enlistment he was sent home three times in an attempt to locate his next of kin. Finally they had to make out the papers to his best girl. Sima came from somewhere in New York State. I can't think of the town. He was as faithful as they make 'em — a regular Gunga Dhin.

"On the night in question the colonel asked me to direct the delivery of ammunition. I went for my motorcycle and on my way I saw a man a few yards away. I stopped and hailed him. It was little Rudolph. He had been there for hours, awaiting to guide the ammunition truck in the right direction.

"Shells were screeching on all sides. He answered my call in his cheery way and started toward me. Shells were dropping on the road.

SHRAPNEL PIERCED HEART.

"Sima dropped dead, almost at my feet. A scrap of shrapnel had pierced his heart. There was nothing inspiring or spectacular about poor Rudolph's job out in the darkness behind the front of the bombarded area that night, but on his vigilance and the safe bursting shells depended the prompt delivery of ammunition for our batteries.

"Rudolph Sima's life was snuffed out behind the front lines, but he was as big a patriot as any that has died for the Stars and Stripes.

"It's miraculous how some drivers on supply or ammunition trucks find their way on the dark roads torn by shells, keeping up a speed of ten or twenty miles, repairing their motor cycles and trucks in an inferno of shells. Occasionally the truck men are hit.

"Dispatch bearers on motor cycles also take awful chances. Now and then one is hit, but experience shows a man messenger is more reliable than the telephone, wireless, pigeons or any other form of courier, though the pigeons are wonderfully successful. We are still using a flock of pack mules as ammunition bearers. The little devils are game under fire.

"One night 'Irish' Costigan of our train, hailing from Hoboken, N. J., climbed on a truck and extinguished a powder fire with a wet tarpaulin.

REAL AMERICAN SPUNK.

"The gang stood aghast, but he turning the trick without burning a finger. That's the kind of stuff the American army is made of.

"Lieutenant Ralph Davenport, of Denver, who was in the hospital with Major Archie Roosevelt for a spell, was my buddie. He started out to enjoy a furlough, and it was the night before he was to leave when he remarked to me with a grin:

"It would be tough if I were hit by a shell just before vacation.'

"Four hours later came the report that a horse-drawn wagon he was riding had been ditched by a shell. Davenport had been wounded by shrapnel in both wrists. He later said he preferred to be wounded at any other place. The reason is that he was the crack crap shooter of the outfit. He had won 1,600 francs in straight ten passes the night before.

"Davey told Roosevelt the only way to shake dice, when both mits are bandaged, is to shake 'em with the teeth. What do you say?"

TELL YOUR WIFE CORNS LIFT OFF

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift corns or calluses off with fingers

Not a twinge of pain or soreness before applying, or afterwards. This may sound like a dream to corn-pestered men and women who have been cutting, filing and wearing tortuous plasters. Yes! Corns lift out and calluses peel off as if by magic, says this prominent authority.

A quarter ounce of freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store. Apply a few drops directly upon your tender corn or callus, and instantly the soreness disappears; then shortly the corn or callus will be so loose that it lifts off.

Freezone dries instantly. It doesn't eat out the corn or callus, but just shrivels it up so it lifts away without even irritating the surrounding skin. Women should keep it on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.—Advertisement.

Great Work Reported by Mrs. Higginson; May Increase Figures

New England women raised $44,461,850 for the third Liberty Loan, according to the complete report which Mrs. F. L. Higginson, chairman for this district, has made to Mrs. Antoinette Funk, in Washington.

Women raised in Massachusetts $23,204,600; in Connecticut, $15,546,350, nearly half the State's quota; in Rhode Island, $3,083,850; in New Hampshire, $2,221,300; in Maine, $994,350, and in Vermont, $853,950. All the town committees organized in Vermont and Rhode Island made reports, and the smallest number of organized towns to report was in Maine, where only 27 of 114 have sent in figures. Some of these may yet be heard from.

In four Massachusetts towns women managed the campaigns alone. All four went above the minimum quota and three towns won stars for their honor flags. In Boston women raised $9,641,250. Wellesley College girls raised $84,000 and Winchester Girl Scouts $62,150.

Of Boston's total, about $3,000,000 came from ward committees; about the same from women subscribing at banks; $3,180,500 from booths in department stores; $65,400 from hotel and restaurants; $300,000 from the women of foreign birth or descent; Girl Scouts, $30,000; schools, $51,950; pledges from Keith's Theatre, followed up by women's committee, $25,000; Special Aid Society, $1,700; National Civic Federation, $2,700; miscellaneous, $1,000.

Margaret Houghton, Mary K. Vincent, Dorothy Kantrich, Elizabeth Benedict, Bertha C. Vogel, Rosalind Sperber, Frieda Altman each won a Girl Scout's badge of honor by selling ten or more bonds.

"Our returns are not all in yet," said Mrs. Higginson "but we have great satisfaction in being able to send word to the National Women's Liberty Loan Committee, in Washington, of what we so far know has been accomplished by the women in this district.

"The banks were not asked to tabulate women's subscriptions this time, so that these figures, with but few exceptions, represent subscriptions taken by the women workers themselves, and they represent not only hard, intensive work, but also a development which insures even greater success with the next loan."

PIANO SALE

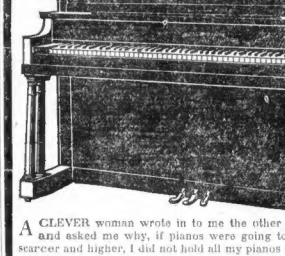
Big Bargains in New and Used Players

OPEN MONDAY, THURSDAY AND SATURDAY TILL 9 P. M.



Despite the High Price Piano Market I Keep Prices Down.

A CLEVER woman wrote in to me the other day and asked me why, if pianos were going to be scarcer and higher, I did not hold all my pianos and take the extra legitimate profit that would later come to me by so doing. While she did not accuse me of being inconsistent, the inference was plain.

My correspondent did not understand my business policy, which is strictly one of big selling and small profits. For example—If I sell a piano today for $450 and make my small profit, what would it avail me to sell that piano for $200 a month later and make only the same profit? My policy is not extra profit—it is small profit and a big volume of business—said big volume is obtained only on the basis of small profit—and big business men will understand this. That is why it is my policy to keep prices down—no matter what the condition of the piano market is.

Gets Record Salary as Head of Detroit Orchestra

Ossip Gabrilowitsch, pianist and composer, who was mentioned as a possible successor to Dr. Karl Muck, as leader of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will receive as conductor of the Detroit Symphony Society Orchestra the largest salary ever paid to any conductor of an American orchestra.

Gabrilowitsch will receive more than $28,000 a year, which was paid to Dr. Muck.

This announcement was made by Harry Cyphers, manager of the orchestra, who refused to name the exact figures to the musician's salary. He drew up a contract with Gabrilowitsch at the latter's home in Bryn Mawr, Pa., and declared that the salary was the largest ever paid for that sort of work.

DR. ANNA SHAW TO ADDRESS SUFFRAGISTS

Mass Meeting in Opera House to Close Two-Days' Convention of Association

By ELIZABETH ELLAM.

The Massachusetts Women's Suffrage Association will hold a mass meeting in the Boston Opera House, Saturday night, May 25, at which Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, selected by President Wilson as the head of the National Women's Committee of the Council of Defence, will be the chief speaker. Suffragists from all parts of Massachusetts will be present at this meeting, which comes as the culmination of a two days' convention and annual outing of the Massachusetts Suffrage Association.

Dr. Shaw has, for over forty years, been affiliated with suffrage interest and forty years ago was instrumental in drafting the Susan B. Anthony amendment, which is now pending in the Massachusetts Senate. It was only in the greater interests of national service that Dr. Shaw put aside her suffrage activities during the period of the war to go out, at President Wilson's behest, lecturing on war work. She has practically organized the "woman power" of this country.

LANDED IN MINISTRY.

Dr. Shaw served as president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association from 1904 to 1915, and is now recognized as the honorary president of that association.

She is an Englishwoman by birth, although since her early childhood her life has been spent in America. In her childhood, women received little more education than the three R's, as it was in the face of considerable objection that she studied at Albion College, Michigan. She then determined to be a minister and received her theological degree from the University of Boston.

To study to be a minister was one thing; to actually be a minister was another. The Methodist Episcopal church would not ordain her. There again she experienced the force of prejudice which limits a woman's activity. Finally she found a church that was willing to allow her to preach the gospel and her first parish was on Cape Cod.

SHE'S A REAL DOCTOR.

Later on, finding that her duties there were fully as much to minister to the physical as to the spiritual ills of her people, she studied and received a medical degree at Boston University.

After seven years in her Cape Cod parish, Dr. Shaw resigned her pastorate in answer to the demand for her as a lecturer. Since that time she has been the most popular and successful speaker in the woman's movement.

Sessions of the convention will be held in the New England Woman's Club rooms, at No. 585 Boylston street. Reports, election of officers and discussion of war activities will occupy the sessions of May 24 and 25.

GOV.-GEN. HARRISON MUST PAY $15,000 ALIMONY

Mrs. Francis Burton Harrison, who is granted divorce from the Governor-General of the Philippine Islands.

San Diego, Cal., May 15.—Alimony of $15,000 a year was granted to Mrs. Frances Burton Harrison, wife of the Governor-General of the Philippine Islands, who secured a divorce in the Superior Court on the ground of desertion.

Mrs. Harrison was awarded two notes in the total sum of $105,000 together with property in trust located on Fifth avenue, New York City. Pending the filing of trust, Governor Harrison is required to pay his former wife $1500 a month in addition to costs.

The income derived from the New York property is to apply as alimony in the amount of $15,000 a year as long as Mrs. Harrison remains unmarried. In the event of her remarriage the sum of $10,000 is to be paid yearly for the care and support of the two minor children. They are to remain in their mother's custody, while the father was granted the right to see and visit them and to counsel and advise in regard to their education.

Mrs. Harrison was the governor-general's second wife. They were married to him in 1907. She was formerly Miss Mabel L. Judson of Brooklyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Judson, and is well known in Boston society circles. It was also the second marriage for her, as she was divorced from Dr. Rowland Cox, Jr.

Mr. Harrison's first wife was Miss Mary Crocker, daughter of a wealthy California family, who died in 1905, leaving her husband a large fortune.

Harrison was appointed governor-general of the Philippines by President Wilson in September, 1912, while a member of the House of Representatives from New York. He is a Democrat, and in the House was ranking majority member of the Ways and Means Committee.

In January of last year it was reported that Mr. Harrison contemplated resigning, and the name of ex-Governor David I. Walsh of Massachusetts was mentioned as a possible successor.

TRUCKS TO MEET NEW TRAFFIC PROBLEMS

By C. F. DONNOCKER.

Manufacturers of motor trucks are already beginning to seriously consider conditions which are bound to arise when traffic on the railroads will be increased, due to the vast amount of merchandise which will be sent overseas when the new American ships begin operation. It is evident that the strain on the railroads will be increased and some definite means of relief must be devised.

Speaking of this condition W. C. Rowley, who was for thirty years general freight agent for the Michigan Central railroad, and is a thorough student and authority on railroad traffic conditions, says:

"The means of relief, obviously, is the motor truck. The performance of American motor trucks throughout the war, and particularly the work they did last Winter during the serious railroad traffic tie-up, show positively that the trucks are the agency to settle this problem.

"Agricultural production such as never has been dreamed of in this country is demanded for this year. The ships which are to be built and will be launched during the coming summer will carry greater cargoes of American products abroad to our own soldiers in France and to the people of England and France particularly, than ever before.

"The motor truck must come to the rescue and the American public must make preparations to meet the great transportation demand. The trucks have proven conclusively that they can relieve the railroads of much of the short haul traffic and that many kinds of freight can be transported on long hauls with great success and at a reasonable cost.

"The Federal Motor Truck Company is now turning out the heaviest production in its history. Federal distributors in all parts of the country are impressing purchasers and prospective purchasers with the necessity for them to rely upon trucks rather than upon railroads, particularly for short haul work and deliveries. This must be done if America is to meet the situation.

"The railroad tie-up of last Winter was not merely a temporary affair. The volume of goods to be moved will not grow less—there is every reason to believe that it will greatly increase. It is not so likely that there will be a serious fuel shortage the coming Winter inasmuch as the American people had a very serious lesson taught to them."

Lieutenant Chase is a brother of Miss Mary Chase, whose marriage to Lieutenant Edward McKittrick was solemnized last Saturday. He is stationed at Camp Devens.

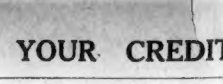
BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS



TARS WITHDRAW FROM SUNDAY GAME HERE

Newport Does Not Take Kindly to Wood's Stand in Regard to Collections

The Newport Naval Reserves, scheduled to play Camp Devens at Braves Field on next Sunday afternoon have withdrawn from the game because of the position of Rear Admiral Wood of the First Naval District in regard to the matter of Sunday collections.

At Newport admission fees and collections have been permitted, but that is in the Second District and it was felt a somewhat delicate situation might arise if the team was to play here under conditions not approved by Rear Admiral Wood, although obtaining in all other districts.

Another game will be substituted for Sunday at Braves Field in place of the one originally scheduled.

In connection with Newport's action President Percy D. Haughton of the Braves issued the following statement today:

The sailors of the Braves, like everybody else in this community, feel Rear Admiral Wood is making a very serious mistake in frowning upon and prohibiting free-will offerings for recognized war charities and funds, not excepting even the Red Cross itself, at these Sunday afternoon games.

It is done in other naval districts without the slightest hesitancy or criticism, and I cannot for the life of me see why Newport's difference in the Boston Club. I do regret the distinction that has been made so adverse to the sailor and his interests.

Where the Red Cross waged to take up a collection at the Army-Navy game a week ago last Sunday the rear admiral based his refusal solely upon his interpretation of the navy rules—an interpretation wholly different from that made by the Army officials themselves. I am not satisfied and I cannot believe that the rear admiral is right in his interpretation of the new State law under which these games are being played.

This is in spite of the fact that he is quite aware that the Braves have District Attorney Pelletier's ruling that there is no violation; that Mayor Peters has personally urged collections and that he is likewise wholly approve. Rear Admiral Wood surely cannot mean to imply that he is not capable of interpreting our own State laws.

On the other hand, it is interesting to note that score cards were sold at the Boston Navy Yard's game in Hunnewell last Sunday as a means of revenue. That was absolutely against the spirit and would be neither permitted nor attempted at Braves Field.

Over 100,000 persons have attended the Braves Field Sunday baseball games to date and the interest in the sport is at its greatest, as well as of the police officers who have attended in their official capacity is that the crowds have been unusually orderly and well behaved. Also these crowds have been not only willing but anxious to contribute, as a collections have been permitted. No one hereabouts shirks doing his bit. The navy body even welcomes the opportunity to help recruiting, and the special character and purposes attached to the Sunday collections, for navy teams cannot play if these special collections are taken. All of us are interested alike in the soldier and the sailor and the success of those funds from which they derive admitted and substantial benefit in one form or another. All of us are pleased that the soldier funds can be thusly increased and the people of Boston will respond as they always do and be glad in helping the sailors from whom, equally with soldier teams, in a division, equally with boys at Somerset games be applied to the funds and charities that mean so much to the men in the service.

War Cloud and Jack Hare Jr. Favorites in $35,500 Event

Baltimore, May 15.—Twenty-six horses were named for the Preakness, which was to be run today at Pimlico in two divisions.

The Preakness, which has long been considered next in importance on the racing card to the Kentucky Derby, even rivals the Blue Grass classic with t he added purse this year. It is worth $35,500.

The management of the Pimlico track decided to throw open the gates for the event and a record-breaking crowd was expected at the track. The Maryland National Guardsmen and other military units were invited and were to act as military police.

Among the imported horses entered are War Cloud, Foreground, Mary Maude, Lanius, Tromp, la Mort and Johren. The most popular of the American horses are Jack Hare Jr., Flags, George Starr, Quietude and Dr. Johnson. Two Cuban horses will be in the race. They are Orestes and Zululand, owned by Colonel Dias.

War Cloud will be in the first race, while Jack Hare Jr. heads the list for the second division. Both horses were expected to rule the favorites.

Harry Payne Whitney's most promising entry, judging from performances this Spring, will be the American bred Flags, a son of Whisk Broom. He easily won his first start last Thursday at Pimlico.

St. Louis, Mo., May 15.—George Whitted, star outfielder of the Philadelphia Nationals, announced today that he had joined the army and will report at Camp Merritt, N. J., May 21.

Chicago, May 15.—Catcher Dilhoeffer of the Phillies, who went to Pat Moran in the deal that brought Grover Alexander and Bill Killifer to the Cubs, entered the game last night and batted and threw well. Moran, as well as of the police officers who have attended in their official capacity is that the crowds have been unusually orderly and well behaved. Also these crowds have been not only willing but anxious to contribute, as a collections have been permitted. No one hereabouts shirks doing his bit. HARVARD FAILS TO ENTER BIG MEET

Crimson Among Missing for Track and Field Championships; 17 Colleges In

Seventeen colleges and universities have entered teams of athletes for the annual track and field championship games of the Intercollegiate Amateur Athletic Association, to be held at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, May 31 and June 1.

The University of Pittsburgh and Harvard University are the only two members of the association which were expected to enter teams and failed to forward a list of entrants.

In the case of Pittsburgh, which team was thought to have had an excellent chance to win position honors, the absence of entries is a surprise to followers of college track athletics.

The lists closed on Saturday in conformity with the I. C. A. A. A. A. constitution, and the only means whereby Pittsburgh can now enter a team would be by a two-thirds vote of consent at a special meeting of the association, and a fifteen-day notice of such a meeting must be given in order to make the same constitutional.

Another surprise was the entry of a team from the University of Michigan, which recently rejoined the Western Conference League and will compete in the "Big Ten" games on June 8 in the Middle West.

The Wolverines have a small group of high-class performers, and should the points be well distributed at Franklin Field, Michigan may succeed in winning the championship in what will probably be her final appearance in Eastern college athletics.

The list of colleges which have entered teams follows: Amherst, Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth, Fordham, Haverford, Georgetown, Johns Hopkins, Lafayette, M. I. T., Michigan, N. Y. University, Pennsylvania, Penn. State, Princeton, Swarthmore and Yale.

CARDS' PROTEST ALLOWED; GAME ORDERED REPLAYED

Cincinnati, May 15.—President August Herrmann of the Cincinnati Nationals said today that President John K. Tener of the National League had allowed the protest of the St. Louis club and ordered the game of April 29 played over on the next visit of the St. Louis team to Cincinnati. Cincinnati had been credited with winning the game by 4 to 3.

Herrmann said that both he and Christy Mathewson had written Tener explanations of the play and asked that a rehearing be granted.

Mulford to Meet Old Foes in Auto Classic

New York, May 15.—Ralph Mulford, one of the pioneers of the automobile racing game, has entered the Harkness Handicap, which is to be the feature of the ten-event speed carnival to be held at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway on Decoration Day.

The Brooklyn speedway idol hastened to sign when he learned that among the starters will be his old rivals, Dario Resta, Barney Oldfield, Louis Chevrolet, Arthur Duray and Ira Vail.

Mulford finished fourth in the Harkness Gold Trophy race at the Bay last September, and hopes to carry off the chief prize in the $30,000 classic at the end of the month.

Mulford holds the world's twenty-four-hour record of 1,819 miles, and won the Vanderbilt Cup at Savannah in 1911.

Promoter William H. Wellman is having a hard time trying to induce Ralph de Palma to enter the Harkness Handicap.

The sprint champion of 1917 does not appear over anxious to get into line unless his terms are met, although he has been working out on the Sheepshead track the past few days.

ASHE NO MATCH FOR NORFOLK; GO STOPPED

Panama Brunette Waved to Corner a Winner in Third Round—Buckley Wins

By J. P. MURPHY.

Kid Norfolk, Panama dusky, chalked up his fourth straight victory in the Hub by scoring a technical knockout over George Ashe of Philadelphia, in the final number at the Armory A. A.'s weekly show at the Arena.

Referee Larry Conley stopped this travesty in the third round when it was apparent that Ashe was sadly outclassed and in line for a terrific mauling. Conley showed good judgment in calling off the fracas.

Norfolk simply smothered Ashe from the opening gong. Rights and lefts to the face and stomach with lightning precision. In the third round he had the Quakey City boxer in a bad way when Conley sensibly called a halt to festivities.

John (Buckley, South Boston battler, checked the winning streak of Tommy Elm of Paterson, N. J., in the ten-round semi-final.

Elm held his own for five rounds, but tired in the next three, and, although he made a Garrison finish, was unable to overcome Buckley's lead.

The last round was the best of the set-to and found both boys in heavy body exchanges from start to finish.

George Freeman, Buckley's manager, states that Elm came in overweight, but that he refrained from claiming the visiting boxers $50 forfeit.

"Tommy was near enough to figure to suit us," states Freeman, "though had he lived up to his agreement, he would have been a trifle drawn and then Johnny wouldn't have had any trouble with him. It was Buckley won in good enough style to suit me."

Bob Ambrose of Cambridge bested Syrian Kid of the South End in a rugged six-round scramble at Cambridge. The latter substituted for Willie Corbett of Somerville, who, evidently has decided to stick to the amateur ranks, as forecasted by the AMERICAN.

Johnny Gray of Chelsea defeated Phil Bruno of East Boston in the second preliminary at eight rounds.

QUEENS TO TAKE McTIGUE'S PLACE AGAINST JEFF SMITH

Kid Queens, New York middleweight, has been substituted for Mike McTigue against Jeff Smith of Bayonne, N. J., in the feature bout of twelve rounds at the Commercial A. A. Friday night. Queens is credited with a decision over McTigue, and, in addition, has bested a Mike O'Dowd, middleweight champion, besides holding his own with Bob McAllister, George Howser and Battling Levinsky.

BUNTS AND BINGLES

—By H. W. LANIGAN—

HUGH JENNINGS' Tiger team, with us today, stands last in the Baseball American League race. It is the only Detroiters are only four games out of first place.

* * *

BOTH VS. COBB was the day's attraction. Now, if Babe Ruths his customary six-light game, while King Tyrus a couple of times did register a few of his choice swings, he will be the undisputed idol of Fenway Park patrons. He's that straight, but Babe's his chance to get so high up on the pedestal he cannot be reached.

* * *

PITCHER ERICKSON of the Tigers is at his home at Jamestown, N. Y., considerably improved as a result of getting rid of a tonsil operation performed Leading Leaguer Al-bert Wednesday. He's been doing good work for it. Jennings will Spring and the Detroit skipper fears he will be without the rookie's services for at least a month.

* * *

THERE'S A single new face in the Tigers' lineup. The newcomer is Leo Dressen, lanky first baseman, a Southpaw workman, whom Jennings has swinging second to Bush in his next order. Dressen was a member with St. Paul the last several seasons. He played a brief engagement with the Cardinals some five or six years back, but landed in the Second Grip before he was given the gate.

* * *

TWAS A boot by Johnny Lavan, who has been putting up a cyclonic race for Griffith all season, that enabled Red Morton to win his game. Speaker hit at a good clip. So did Roth and Williams. The Williams in question is the ex-Senator, and old Alms is doing a mighty efficient job on the Indians' right corner. Then, he always did hit.

* * *

CACTUS CRAVATH'S timely double was the wallop that beat Willie Doak and the Cardinals.

* * *

RED FABER turned in a three-blow game for the White Sox on Scout Perry, whom Stallings is banking upon coming back to the Braves, buried his opponents, 6 to 0, in nine innings. Hits, 6; whiffs, 1; walks, 2; errors, 0.

* * *

THE PIRATES came close to making it three straight over the Giants. Miller shaded Barnes as regards the hit question, but timely pokes by Kauff, Hoke and Rodriguez beat him. Likewise, did a starry play in the pinch by Heinicuh cause trouble to the Pirates. The socks were parked: Pinch-hitter Hinchman slapped one, but H. Z. clinched on and put the kibosh on a scoring rally.

TRIS SPEAKER TACKS ON 10 POINTS; SMYTH LANDS IN BIG THREE

THE three leading hitters of the American League remain the same as yesterday. Speaker smatted at a .368 clip against Washington, while neither Ruth or Maisel was in action. They now stand:

	A.B.	H.	P.C.
Ruth, Boston	39	19	.487
Speaker, Cleveland	77	33	.429
Maisel, St. Louis	30	12	.400

Smyth of the St. Louis Cardinals nearly equalled the batting mark of Larry Doyle in the National League when he brought his average up to less than one point below that of the Giant veteran.

Fred Merkle of the Cubs broke into the list of the three high men, passing Flack, a team mate; Red Smith of Boston and Benny Kauf of New York. The three leaders:

	A.B.	H.	P.C.
Doyle, New York	64	28	.438
Smyth, St. Louis	49	17	.425
Merkle, Chicago	77	29	.377

FULLERTON'S COLUMN

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Tommy McCarthy, who, in his day, was the greatest of outfielders and the Ty Cobb of the pioneers of the game, sprung a new thought on me the other day as we watched the game.

"How long has it been since you saw a head first slide?" he asked.

"Years," I responded. "Except in a few cases of men diving back to first base. Why?"

"In the old days," Tommy said, "head first sliding was part of the game for the simple reason that a runner going from first to second at top speed gains distance and time by sliding head first and loses at least a step when he changes position to make a feet first slide or a fall-away."

"But you old-timers invented the hook," I protested. "Kelly, Burns, all the old Chicago team, all the old Boston and Baltimore players, hooked when they slid."

"True" he admitted, "but never when we thought we had the ball tied or beaten. In stealing, if a runner thought he had an equal chance with the ball, he slid head first because he gained time.

"If he saw, or believed, the ball would beat him to the base, he hooked and made the fall-away either in front of or behind the base to escape being touched by the ball. Hook-sliding is merely dodging a baseman while head-first sliding is gaining time and distance."

I recalled that Harry Stovey, who stole 155 bases in a short season, Billy Hamilton, McCarthy, Lange and Hughie Duffy all used the head-first slide and the hook slide. Kelly himself slid head-first many times. The idea may be one for some players to try out.

* * *

Probably the most unexpected development of the present baseball season has been the remarkable playing of the comeback crowd. The veterans who were counted out of it last Fall and declared ready for the scrap heap are doing better work even than the young recruits, and some of them are providing real sensations.

When the boys strike that minor chord then you know what blend means

Great stuff, isn't it, when the harmony hounds get together, and tear off a few yards from those good old-time songs.

Maybe their voices would make a regular music shark howl with pain. But when they strike those rich minor chords—boy, they're there with the wallop.

No music just like a quartet, you say, when the voices blend just right.

Get that word "blend?"

That's the secret of the whole thing.

Not Jim's tenor, nor Bill's sub-cellar bass that starts down in his toes, but the way they fit together tells the tale.

There's a lot in that word "blend."

It's the secret of a lot of good things—cigarettes, for instance. That blend idea has made Mecca the favorite cigarette with over a million smokers. There are twelve mighty choice tobaccos used in Mecca cigarettes—five kinds of Turkish and seven kinds of American—but you don't taste the flavor of any one of them separately when you take a deep drag. The only flavor you get is the good old Mecca flavor.

No one tobacco has everything you want in a cigarette.

Each of the twelve tobaccos in Mecca cigarettes is picked for a special purpose. One for fragrance, another for smoothness, still another for body—to let you know you're really smoking—and so on down the line.

Here's how the still-blending process works. The different tobaccos are not just mixed, but are placed together in the blending still. Then moist heat is passed through until all the different flavors are drawn into one—the flavor that has made Mecca the favorite cigarette with over a million smokers.

7 KINDS OF DOMESTIC TOBACCO
5 KINDS OF TURKISH TOBACCO

Still-Blended

By the Mecca still-blending process, moist heat is passed through these twelve selected tobaccos. The full rich flavor of each is drawn out and merged into one, much as the full flavor of tea is drawn out by steeping. Only in this way can be obtained the Mecca flavor.

Originated by The American Tobacco Co.

THERE ARE 5,000,000 LICENSED MOTOR CARS in the United States. In half a day enough Mecca cigarettes are made to supply every automobile driver with a Mecca.

KING TYRUS AND PALS IN HUB

Detroits Open Four-Day Stand at Fenway Park—Slugger-Pitcher Ruth Ready for 'Em

By NICK FLATLEY.

Baseball's two greatest hitters start a four-day battle this afternoon.

Battering Babe Ruth and Tyrus Raymond Cobb exchange compliments here in our midst for the next quartet of p. m.s.

Battering Babe is leading the American League. Tyrus Raymond has been doing that for many a long season. He isn't up there yet this year, but he's on the way. Babe has already arrived, and is wildly waving his war club just now challenging all contenders.

Ty, it might be mentioned, is here with the Tigers, who landed today. These Jennings' youngsters are seriously considered as factors in the race, and all Bos wants to see them.

EE-YAH! LOOK WHO'S HERE.

Ee-yah Hughey and Ty have always been drawing cards par excellence hereabouts, and it's more than possible that their advent will signalize Boston's return to real baseball crowds.

Thus far the season has been a dismal disappointment for both Boston teams. Winning streaks and champion attractions have failed to draw anything like enough rooters to pay expenses. Interest is just about nil now.

The coming of the Tigers may effect a change. It's one of those crucial series, therefore, even thus early in the year. And the hitting of Battering Babe and Ty will be the high light beyond any possibility of a doubt.

The big Boston left-hander has had three days of rest, and, consequently, is ready to pitch and bat just as well as ever he did, which is saying a mouthful.

Battering Babe's big shadow has been cast over the baseball world of late so largely that even Ty has been eclipsed. The name Ruth is on every tongue in diamond circles these days. Wherefore you have a perfect setting for some excitement.

TY IS GETTING NERVOUS.

King Ty is anxious to get back on his pedestal and have his well-known name in the headlines each succeeding morning and afternoon.

Battering Babe, a great, big youngster, is anxious to keep in the game daily and get his hits. He enjoys occupying the pedestal and admits it.

This little personal battle, with the Sox trying to hang onto first place and the Tigers struggling to get there, has all the elements of regular mid-season fireworks.

Yesterday's rain gave the somewhat wearied Red Sox a chance to loaf, and warm up their pristine vigor. It means a double-header with the Browns later on, but the present is what counts with Manager Ed Barrow.

STRONG MAN, AGE 52, IS OUT TO SHOW PROWESS

John Y. Smith, Boston strong man, is a believer in the old saying: "A man is as young as he feels."

John is fifty-two, but possesses all the spirit of youngster of twenty. He aims to prove that age is no handicap by attempting to lift over his head a 130-pound dumbbell with both right and left hand.

The event is scheduled to take place at Boston Y. M. C. U., June 5. Dr. Sargent of Harvard will be invited to act as referee.

Two years ago Smith put up a 203½-pound weight with both his left and right hand.

BRAVES TACKLE CARDINALS IN OPENER

Stallings Elated Over Showing of Fillingim in Final Game With the Cubs

St. Louis, May 15.—The Braves are here and as happy as larks, for a five-game series with the Cardinals.

The ride down from Chicago was the most pleasurable that the Bostonians have indulged in since the opening of the National League season and the reason thereof is not difficult to find.

They won a series, their first of the year, defeating the Cubs, 5 to 0, thus administering to Chicago its first shut-out of the season.

The youthful Dave Fillingim is the big hero of the Boston squad. Every good pitcher in the West has faced the Chicagoans and none could perform the feat accomplished by the rookie, holding the men of Mitchell for nine innings without the semblance of a run.

WILD BUT EFFECTIVE.

Fillingim deserved the honor. He was touched for six hits, one of them a fluke. He was ever threatening to blow up; in fact, his apparent inability to place the ball where he willed worked to his advantage.

The Cubs, certain that he would ascend, were constantly waiting until they found themselves in the hole with a pair of strikes and then they could take no chances, usually hitting out a bad one. It was a clever game in the extreme that this young fellow hurled.

Herzog's hitting featured and Buck was strong enough with the bat to have won the game without assistance. He smashed out three hits, one of them a double; scored two runs and generally conducted himself as one should who has demanded a high price for his services.

Still Herzog wasn't the only Bostonian who had the range, for Konetchy and Red Smith likewise pummelled the offerings of Jim Vaughn, each getting two timely hits.

REHG BUNGED UP.

At that, the Braves were compelled to pay dearly for their victory, as Walter Rehg was badly injured in the fourth inning. With Wilson on first and Konetchy on second, Rehg smashed a single to centre that nullified Big Ed and sent Wilson to third.

Pskaert let go of a wild chuck toward the plate and Rehg darted to second. He expected a return throw, saw the ball was going wild, and, instead of sliding for the base, changed his mind and tried to go standing up. Result: A twisted leg.

As a Result Clark Griffith Plans Starting Sabbath Day Performances at Once

Washington, May 15.—The Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia has legalized the playing of Sunday baseball.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 15.—A change in the ownership of the Minneapolis American Association baseball club is in prospect, it became known today. Local business men are said to be negotiating with Mike Cantillon, Joseph Cantillon and E. J. Archambault, the present owners, for purchase of the club.

It is understood that a price was set at a conference held here last night. It was attended by President T. J. Hickey of the American Association, and E. J. Westlake of Minneapolis, who represented the prospective purchasers.

Boston College and Holy Cross were to meet in their second baseball encounter of the season, on the University Heights diamond, this afternoon.

The rival rooters were relied upon turning out in big droves; in fact, one of the biggest throngs of the season was confidently expected to be on hand.

Cardinal O'Connell planned attending as the guest of the Very Rev. Charles W. Lyons, S. J., president of Boston College.

Boston College won from Holy Cross in their battle at Worcester early in the season, and Jimmy Fitzpatrick, Maroon and Old Gold's skilled hurler, was sent back against the Purple by Captain Gildea.

Fitzpatrick's victory over Holy Cross, on Fitton Field, was the only time Boston College ever defeated the Worcester collegians in baseball, and, if Jimmy repeats today, he will be more popular than ever—and he's already considerable of a hero—with his mates.

With Holy Cross leading right side up today, a third game will probably be arranged, with its location decided by toss.

The entire student body of Boston College High school was to be present. Classes were dismissed early so as to enable the students to reach the grounds before starting time.

Corbett's Corner

By JAMES J. CORBETT

One of my readers sent me a letter a few days ago which carried these two questions:

"1. How does hitting in the major leagues of the present day compare with that of five, ten and fifteen years ago?"

"2. Have there been as many .300 hitters in the past few years as there were ten years and more ago?"

These questions started me on a search through the records and in doing so I discovered that the batsmen of the past few years have clouted quite effectively—sufficiently so to shatter the belief that hitting in the majors has slumped from the heights of other years.

The grand batting average of both leagues for 14 seasons has been .250, while the combined swat mark of the National and American in 1917 was .255—less than 5 points difference.

The two leagues produced a total of twenty-five .300 hitters last year—a mark that has been exceeded only five times in fourteen years. So that's another bit of testimony that refutes the assertion that heavy hitters are disappearing from major league realms.

1912 THE RECORD YEAR.

The high-water mark as regards .300 hitters and league averages was reached in 1911 and 1912. In 1911 thirty-five Americans banged .300 or better—two going beyond .400—while the National produced twenty-two in the same season.

In that year the Johnsonian swatsmiths amassed a grand average of .274, against .260 for the National.

That .274 mark, by the way, is the greatest ever turned in since 1904, in which year the 154 game-schedule became effective in both circuits.

Nineteen hundred and twelve, however, was the blue-ribbon year, with a total of 62 men in the .300 class and the two leagues hitting for the grand average of .263.

The American exhibited 30 men in the .300 division that year, while the National had 32. The batting average of the American was .266, while the National established its own record with .272.

NEW MARK FOR 14 YEARS.

Among the unusual incidents brought out by the study of the averages is that a preponderance of .400 artists doesn't always mean that the league itself is hitting for a mighty average.

The 1917 season is one of the best examples. In that year 19 batsmen in the American swatted .300 or better, while only six could turn the trick in the National.

Now you naturally would suppose that this would indicate a huge lead for the American in the grand batting average. But the figures really show that the National, with a grand batting average of .249, led the American, which, despite its flock of .300 hitters, could total only .248.

Here is a table, comprehensive and easily understood, which may be of value later on when arguments come up concerning clouting records:

JESS BARNES IS STARRING FOR McGRAW

When John McGraw and George Stallings sat down to talk turkey on the trade which brought Larry Doyle and Jess Barnes to the Giants for Charley Herzog and Jimmy Smith, McGraw stipulated that he be permitted to select one of the Braves pitchers.

Finally Stallings consented, and at the time it is said he believed McGraw would name Dick Rudolph.

So Stallings was somewhat surprised when Mac named Jess Barnes, and was pretty well satisfied in the bargain.

McGraw's wisdom in making the choice of Barnes has been borne out so far.

Harvard was to present a slightly rearranged line-up this afternoon in its contest on Soldiers Field with the Naval Radio School nine, owing to the absence of Captain Gross, who reported today to Colonel Croft at Devens, where he is to study for an officer's commission.

Red Wolverton was to take Gross' place in the infield, with Dickson on duty at the vacated post at second base.

Newton and Gammack were slated to oppose the wireless crew, while Gunner McMahon's hopefuls looked for Wolfram and Haus to bring them safely home with a victory.

The Four of Hearts

A SERIAL OF YOUTH AND LOVE

Milton Asks Cynthia to Beg Dora Not to Sacrifice Herself for His Sake

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER LV.

Copyright, 1913, Star Company.

HALF-WAY down the stairs Cynthia Long paused. Mr. Van Saun had told her that Milton was waiting for her down here; that he and she were to have tea together. Her heart beat fast at the thought.

Her recent conversation with her cousin, and Dora's excited confession, were fresh in her mind. Edward Van Saun's acknowledgment of his fears for his son, and his renewed expression of condemnation of loveless unions, had agitated Cynthia so that she longed to be alone to face the present situation. She wondered if she might slip out of the house without waiting for tea. Yet that would seem rude to her host.

A step in the hall below reminded her that some one might note her hesitation, and she hurried on down the stairs. At their foot she came face to face with Milton Van Saun.

"I have been waiting for you," he said. "Dad told me he would let me see you after he had had his confab with you. It was a sort of reward for a good boy who came home early, I suppose."

He laughed as he led her into the drawing-room, yet his manner lacked its natural buoyancy. A maid was placing the tea-tray on a small table, and neither of the pair spoke until she had withdrawn.

"Will you pour the tea, Cynthia?" Milton asked.

She obeyed silently. The situation had a domestic kind of air about it, she reflected swiftly, then rigidly gave her attention to the task in hand.

"Have some cinnamon toast," Milton urged. "It's really very good."

She accepted it, still in silence.

"I say, this is cozy, isn't it?" the man said.

"And the cinnamon toast is delicious," Cynthia remarked.

What trivialities to utter when their hearts were full of serious matters, she thought. She could think of absolutely nothing to say. Only three things were in her mind —Dora's lack of love for Milton; Milton's unhappiness; the sin of her own prospective loveless marriage. And she could speak of none of these.

But a moment later Milton made speech on one of the subjects necessary.

A Pertinent Question

"Cynthia," he asked, bluntly, "what's the matter with Dora? She's not like herself these days. What's troubling her?"

Cynthia looked at him calmly, in spite of her inner perturbation.

"I cannot tell you, Milton," she replied. "You would better ask Dora."

"But that does no good," he declared "Let me speak frankly with you, Cynthia, for you are a good friend, and I trust you absolutely."

Just what his father had said only a few minutes ago!

"Well," he went on, when she made no protest, "I have tried to get the truth out of Dora. But, for some reason, she is afraid to tell me how she feels. She evades the main question. Something came up the other night that made me suspect that everything was not just as her family pretend to believe. But she gave me no chance to learn the facts. Since then I have not been able to bring myself to ask her the one question that would settle things. But, in spite of that, she had shown me in unmistakable ways what her answer to that question would be."

"What is the question?" Cynthia inquired, gently.

"Whether she loves me or not. Ah! I see by your face that you know about it, but I will not ask you to tell me. Only there is one question that you can answer honorably. It is this: Does what you have seen for yourself make you think that Dora is happy?"

She waited for a minute before answering. Surely nothing but the truth should be spoken at this juncture!

"No," she said simply.

"I was sure of that!" the man exclaimed. "And I am sure of another thing. That is that Dora does not love me and does not want to marry me."

He sprang to his feet and walked to the window, standing there with his back to the room.

Cynthia obeyed an impulse she could not have explained. Setting her cup down, she rose hastily and crossed the room to where this man stood. He did not turn at her approach.

"Milton," she said softly, "I am so sorry for you! I wish I could help you."

"Don't Pity Me"

His wheeled about sharply and caught her hand in his. "Don't pity me!" he said harshly. "It unnerves me. And I am not to be pitied about —about the matter we have been talking of. I have been sure for days now that Dora does not love me. But that does not hurt me, except that she does not trust me enough to tell me that she is tired of our engagement. We will both be better and happier as mere friends than as husband and wife."

"Oh, Milton!" Cynthia exclaimed. "You are excited and don't know what you are saying!"

"Yes," he insisted, "I do. Shall I tell you why we have no right to marry? But—never mind that now! First let me ask a great big favor of you. Will you grant it?"

"You know that I will," she answered.

She left his side and went back to her chair. She felt slightly sick and giddy. Milton did not love Dora. Dora did not love Milton. Then, if only Gerald Stewart did not love her—Cynthia.

She pressed her hands tightly together. She must not let her thoughts fly off wildly in this way.

Milton came and stood in front of her. "Cynthia," he said, "the favor I have to ask is this: Talk to Dora, and tell her that she must not sacrifice herself for my sake. Make her see what a sin it would be for any woman to marry a man she does not love. Don't say a word about how I feel. All I want is to make her happy. But to marry a man one does not love is a sin, Cynthia. You believe that, don't you?"

She nodded. "Yes, she said very softly. "I believe that, Milton."

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Wedding Expenses

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Kindly let me know whether the groom "foots the bills" for auto service, music and minister's fee. Am to be married in June. And what does the bride pay for? You will relieve my puzzled mind. ANITA A.

THE bride naturally pays for her own costume and for the wedding which her parents are giving. She generally presents little gifts to her wedding attendants. The groom gives his wife-to-be her bridal bouquet and sends flowers to the attendants. He also offers the minister a fee, but no part of the wedding which is given by the bride's parents does he pay for. Common sense will help you work this out. Naturally, the groom also pays for the car in which he and his bride travel. Why draw all these careful lines of demarcation and make so much fuss about the money part of what ought to be a sacred ceremony?

When Few Women Used Face Powders, Creams or Cosmetics.

Now, almost every woman uses them—and without concealment. It is conceded that she has the right to retain her youthful look as long as she can. If your hair is gray, streaked with gray or faded, you, too, can bring back all its natural color with this simple, harmless preparation.

Q-ban is not a dye. You can prove this by trying it on your combings. Dyes will color them, but Q-ban leaves them unchanged. It is a wonderful and delightful toilet requisite which keeps the hair glossy and youthful. Does not stain the scalp, or wash or rub off, and does not interfere with washing or waving the hair. The New Americanism

PROF. McKEEVER GIVES HIS IDEA OF IT

By William A. McKeever

One of the Nation's Foremost Educational Authorities

AMERICA—

"The home of the free."

"The land of the brave."

"The watchword of Independence."

"The refuge of the oppressed."

"The place of opportunity."

"The champion of democracy."

In times past all these familiar sounding mottoes have been worked into the sentiment of our children at school, in the home and elsewhere. But a little analysis of these will make it evident to the thinking mind that they are all more or less naive, puerile maxims, and that they do not well inculcate the broad Americanism for which this country now stands.

The watchwords expressed above are suggestive of the boastings of boys and the selfish contentions of youths. By means of them we have been teaching a sort of childish and superficial Americanism. It is not to be expected that a boy will acquire a broad conception of citizenship so long as his mind is nourished in merely acquisitive and defensive ideals. Boiled down, they mean too nearly this: America is a place to get things and to fight for what you have.

Question the first dozen men you meet and you will find them more or less obsessed upon these cutworn watchwords of national purpose. It is not enough. Such thoughts are too selfish and individualistic. We must teach that America now stands for achievement, for the accomplishment of high purposes and especially for the production of these things which represent the higher needs of humanity.

America is now grown. She has reached her majority. She has attained the "things" which represent childish desire and is now in an era of production. The product of her labor is the big thing. The point of her endeavor is the highest consummation of her glorious existence.

So the new watchword of the nation begins to appear as a thing which we can use as an ideal for our boy, our girl. It is achievement. It is the product of honest industry. It is the gift of sustained endeavor. It is the fruitage of a career spent in the pursuit of a spiritual purpose.

Now, the present war is one of the great and terrible incidents in the superb career of this mighty nation. Measured by the span of centuries it will be considered as her brief period of travail. America is a great spiritual organization and her permanent achievements are only such as can be stored away in the soul of her high-minded people.

Make your boy, your girl, high-minded. Keep reminding him of this great new Americanism. Teach him that the tasks, the lessons, the difficulties, the getting of things—that these are but incidents in his superb possible career of achievement. Teach him that the fruitage of life is the big thing. My friend, Professor Thomas Gibson, of Baltimore, has expressed this idea splendidly for the young in the following lines:

"OUR COMMONWEALTH"

"Two ears of corn where one was grown,
Two blades of wheat instead of one,
And richer soil from year to year—
And this nation's heart will cheer.

"In orchard and in garden lot,
In sheepfold and on grazing plot,
A fairer fruit and better flock,
All this our nation's wealth in stock.

"In mine and shop, there honest toil
Brings wealth to add to that of soil.
A man's divine in the free land
Who works with steadfast heart and hand.

"The school, the field, their aims are one,
The home unites when work is done;
Our greatest worth are lives that bind
A commonwealth of humankind.

"A common wealth, a common aim,
In school, in field, in shop, the same;
To train the soul, give skill to hand,
All this will save God's chosen land."

For Sweet Sixteen

MAKING A SPRING SUIT AT HOME

By Rita Stuyvesant

SWEET sixteen "adores" pretty clothes, and very often neither has a time keeping the growling daughter well dressed. Girls of this age are aware "love" to look older, and this is a subject of much contention in many families. However, designers are becoming more practical and are offering a number of smart models for juvenile figures. Suits that are grown up, yet not too much, should be chosen, for it is a difficult problem to dress a girl whose figure is beginning to develop rapidly.

Because "sixteen" outgrows her suits so quickly, the thrifty mother will not spend a lot of money dressing her. Although a girl generally "hates to wear hand-me-downs," nevertheless with a little careful planning sister's old blue serge can be remodeled into a really smart suit for a young girl.

A pretty Spring suit for a juvenile figure can be made of blue serge, in Eton style, with vest and turned-down collar of blue and white polka dotted foulard. A little black cravat bow holds the jacket together at the collar. To make a suit of this kind from an old blue serge of a larger size, it is best to rip the old suit carefully apart and press it. Remove the spots, if possible. With the aid of a good "misses size" pattern you can generally recut the suit especially into an Eton model.

If the original skirt was very full or pleated you will have enough for the Eton suit, which is really more becoming for a young girl. Box pleats about an inch wide are fashionable if the skirt is not made too long.

Perhaps there is only enough material for a gored or circular skirt. Very often a box pleat or two can be laid directly in front and a few in the back, the rest of the skirt remaining plain. However, in any case do not make the skirt too narrow, for nothing is more ridiculous than a tight skirt on a slim, undeveloped figure.

The coat will be very simple to make with an Eton pattern. A collar, cuffs and girdle of polka dot foulard give a smart touch.

Instead of the polka dot collar, some girls prefer to wear a white starched pique Rustey Brown collar with a polka dot necktie.

For the growing girl of sixteen who still has that youthful slender silhouette, these Eton suits with Buster Brown collars are adorable. Almost any old style suit can be recut for a juvenile size. "Sixteen" will be delighted with this girlish suit, and mother will be pleased with the money saved.

Beautiful Hair! Fluffy, Glossy, Lovely Hair!

If you want beautiful hair you must have a healthy scalp to clean hair. Your hair falls out, it is dull and lifeless and you have dandruff because you do not wash your hair properly. Probably the greatest cause of gray hair is due to robbing the hair of its natural life by the caustic contained in soap and shampoo preparations. In the first place, any shampoo that lathers must contain caustic soda or potash. These dangerous alkalies deaden the hair and cause dandruff by killing the outer cuticle of the scalp. A specialist has perfected a mild, harmless preparation for washing the face instead of dangerous soap. The same preparation has been discovered to be wonderful for cleansing the hair. All you do is to take a heaping teaspoonful of this substance, called Arm-Mara, and dissolve it in a half glass of hot water. Pour your head from the glass on your head and work it thoroughly into the scalp and hair. Then rinse and dry your hair carefully. You will be surprised at the marvelous result. You will not only have thought you had such beautiful hair, fluffy, glossy, lovely hair. And the best of it is while you are washing your hair you are using a treatment to restore the beauty of your hair and the health of the scalp. Dandruff cannot exist where the scalp is in its natural healthy condition. This treatment is certainly a great blessing to those who have dandruff and dull, lifeless hair, and who are afraid of their hair turning gray. Be careful to save these directions, because when you get Arm-Mara from your druggist you do not get instructions with it for treating the hair. Also, if your druggist says he cannot get Arm-Mara from your druggist you can order fifty cents worth of Arm-Mara from Herbert Sortomme, P. O. Box 1606, 16 E. 18th St., New York.—Advertisement.

Puss in Boots Jr.

By David Cory

NOW, in the last story I promised to tell you about a big, tremendous giant who was coming across the meadow just as little Puss Junior on his donkey stood before the fairy's cottage.

"Ha, ha! Ho, ho! My name is Gobo.
I'm a giant, big and strong.
See here, little cat, with your feathered hat,
You'll soon sing a different song,
For I'll eat you, my dear, with a gallon of beer,
As soon as my wife makes the fire."
And he called to his wife, as he opened his knife,
"I've something for supper, Maria."

But do you think Puss was afraid? No, indeed. He never turned a whisker, but pulled out his sword and waved it in the air. "Don't you come a mile further!" he shouted, for every time the giant took a step it was a mile, more or less, you know. And this made the giant laugh so loud that he almost blew out the sun like a candle. And then he reached over and tried to pull Puss off the donkey. But before he could, Puss waved his flaming gold feather, and the giant blinked his eyes and stood still.

"What kind of a feather is that?" he asked, and he passed his hand over his eyes, for they hurt him, you see, because the feather was a magic one, you remember.

And then the little fairy, who was standing in the door of her house with her three little fairy friends, waved her silver wand and said, "Presto, change!" and that big giant turned into a little mouse, and before he could run away Puss killed him. And wasn't that strange, for many years ago Puss Junior's father, the famous Puss in Boots, had killed a man in very much the same way. Perhaps Puss inherited this from his father. Who knows? I'm sure I don't!

"Well, that's the end of Giant Gobo," said Puss, and the fairies laughed, for they were really afraid of him as afraid of mice, too, and after that Puss rode away on his donkey until he came to a very strange sort of tree. It was covered with little fans instead of leaves, and when the wind blew the fans opened and shut. And then Puss broke off one of the little fans. But as soon as he did it a voice cried out:

"How dare you take away a fan.
You naughty little pussy cat man!"

And after that an old witch crept out from behind a bush and took hold of the donkey's bridle.

"I'm very sorry, ma'am," said Puss, "but I didn't know it was your tree," and he offered her a gold piece.

"I don't want your money," she said. "What would I do with money?" And she laughed in a disagreeable way.

More Than Nine Hundred Candidates Assigned to School Barracks

By WILLIAM FLYNN.

Camp Devens, May 15.—The Fourth Officers' Training School opened here today with approximately 950 candidates and practically all day was consumed in assigning the candidates to the various school barracks which are the same as those formerly occupied by the candidates in the Third Officers' Training School.

Many of the college men chosen as candidates reached the cantonment early, among them a colored student sent here from Dartmouth College. The official order which created the Fourth Officers' Training School made no provision for colored candidates and the student from Dartmouth will probably be sent to one of the colored training camps in the South.

The names of the officers assigned to instruct and organize the men in the draft enrolled at New York University, Brown University, University of Vermont and New Hampshire State College, were announced at division headquarters today.

First Lieutenants Thomas C. Bradford, 302d Machine Gun Battalion; William A. Schmidt, 302d Infantry, and Miles W. Weeks of the 301st Ammunition Train, and Second Lieutenants Kenneth R. Toye, Robert Sanderson and Hardy D. Guthrie, Jr., all of the 301st Infantry, have been sent to New York University. First Lieutenant John T. Morris of the 302d Machine Gun Battalion and Second Lieutenant Carl W. Amende went to Brown.

First Lieutenants John Foster and Walter A. Fenning and Second Lieutenants Charles O. Austin and Dwight V. Baldwin, all of the 302d Infantry, have gone to the University of Vermont and the following from the same regiment are assigned to New Hampshire State College:

First Lieutenants John H. Leeming and Philip W. Ayer and Second Lieutenants Harvey P. Barnes and Frederick Burns.

Five bands from this cantonment, including those of the 301st, 302nd, 303rd and 304th Infantry Regiments and the 302nd Field Artillery, are going to Boston on Saturday to take part in the Red Cross parade, although it was said here today that no troops would be sent from this cantonment.

The 301st Machine Gun Battalion and one battalion of the 303rd Infantry Regiment, however, are going to Fitchburg with the 303rd Field Artillery Band to take part in a Red Cross demonstration in that city on Saturday. The contingent will be under the command of Major Will D. Wills.

Two ambulance companies are also to be sent to Manchester, N. H., on Saturday to stage an exhibition drill at the baseball game between the physicians and lawyers of that city.

Eighty-four members of the depot brigade have been transferred to the school for cooks and bakers and it was also announced that 367 men out of more than 7,000, who came here in the last draft, had been discharged for physical disability or other reasons.

EDITORIAL

The United States is at war and the flag means more to the people than it ever did. Therefore the average citizen should put himself out to learn the proper thing to do when the Star Spangled Banner or "To the Colors" are being played.

The lack of respect of the flag displayed by many visitors at Camp Devens at retreat is galling to the soldiers, who believe the flag—emblem of the Nation and symbol of everything the country is fighting to uphold—should be honored by the civilian population as well as by the men in the service.

The stand of the soldiers is well taken and should be seriously considered by every man, woman and child. She asserts that anyone can do in this war is to pay his respects to the grandest colors in the world every time they should be paid.

ENGINEERS GET FIRST TRY AT CAMP LIFE

By WILLIAM FLYNN.

Camp Devens, Ayer, May 15.—Two regiments were in camp outside of the cantonment today—the 301st engineers at Ashburnham and the 304th infantry at Still River. This was the second time the 304th, commanded by Colonel J. S. Herron, had gone into camp under canvas, but it was the first experience of the soldiers in the engineer regiment.

The engineer camp is situated on a gentle slope overlooking upper Nonkeag Lake and is an ideal site for a camp ground. The pup tents are pitched on what is known as the Cobb estate and is fringed on both sides by woods. The men were up at reveille today and the camp hummed with activity. Many of the soldiers walked with a limp, due to blisters they received on the long hike from the cantonment to Ashburnham, but altogether they enjoyed their experience.

After breakfast several of the soldiers took a dip in the lake and later the whole regiment was put to work solving field problems. A half holiday was declared in Ashburnham and the entire community turned out to entertain the soldiers. Flags flew from nearly every house in the town and the regiment was greeted by a chorus of hells and horns.

Tonight the men of the regiment will give a minstrel show in the Ashburnham town hall and will start their hike back to the cantonment tomorrow.

Major J. Edward Cassidy is in command of the regiment during the absence of Colonel P. A. Pope, who is away on leave, and the second in command is Major Robert Whipple of Worcester.

Colonel Herron divided his command and each was given a different objective to take. Both sections of the regiment met at a point a short distance from Still River and fought a vigorous sham battle.

RECEIVING SHIP WILL HAVE YEOWOMEN

By S. HARRY FERRIS.

Aboard the Receiving Ship at Boston, May 15.—The old ship Commonwealth is to be invaded by yeowomen. It will be the first ship in the navy to have them as part of its executive force.

The matter has een under discussion for some time and there has been considerable argu ent as to the probable success or failure of the project. In the past there has been only one yeo-woman, Mrs. Briggs, of the Hampton's office, on board. If the best of sister workers that are to arrive make good it is probable that they will be introduced on other receiving ships.

The young women will have pleasant quarters in the rooms that are to be given up to the paymaster's department when it is transferred from the Navy Yard. Their duties will be confined to work under the supervision of Paymaster T. F. Hull.

The Sick Bay was camouflaged Tuesday to look like a piece of out-doors by the arrival of two big boxes of wild flowers sent by the school children of Stoneham. There were many bunches of violets, lilacs, pansies and wild honeysuckle. They were gathered by children under the direction of Miss Evelyn F. Cross of the Dean School.

Another Lesson in Farming Out Government Property

Taught in the History of British East India Company and Impeachment of Warren Hastings

A little while ago the AMERICAN told how the great ancient Roman republic farmed out the collection of its taxes to private companies and capitalists; how this policy of permitting private capital and private special interest and private monopolies to perform a public function led to abuse, extortion, corruption and scandal so great that those who were connected with the collection of taxes became a stench in the nostrils of honest men and repulsive to the whole people. So great was the hatred of the tax collectors that the people of Jerusalem even distrusted Christ when they saw him entering the house of a tax collector, saying: "He has gone to eat with a man who is a sinner." And they were not satisfied until Christ came out with the tax collector, and the tax collector said:

Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor, and if I have taken anything from any man wrongfully I will give it back fourfold.

To which Christ replied:

Today has salvation come to this house! For the Son of Man came to seek and to save that which has been lost.

Of all the things connected with the Roman government, the most hated and despised were the tax collectors. Mommsen, the greatest of the classic Roman historians, says of this system:

The system of Roman financial administration, under which the indirect taxes as well as the domain revenues were levied by means of middlemen, in itself granted to the Roman capitalist class the most extensive advantages at the expense of those liable to taxation.

Professor Ferrari, as we have said, the greatest living authority on Roman history, says of these middlemen who collected the taxes which the Roman government ought to have collected itself and which, most fortunately, our government does collect for itself:

The tax farmers, all of them either Romans or Italians, enjoyed the open patronage of the government in their systematic pillage. There were few devices either of fraud or violence which their ingenuity left untried. They would force the natives into debt in order to pay the taxes and then eventually despoil them of all their goods. No wonder that the district (where these middlemen tax collectors operated) came to be regarded as the happy hunting ground of millionaires!

We shall now tell a great and classic story of modern times in which a great government undertook to allow a private corporation to perform a public function and to make private gain out of that performance.

It was within our modern times that Great Britain conquered India. India had a vast population, next to China the most congested population in the world. They were poor, spiritless people, deprived of their virility by the heat of their climate and by the circumstances of their political and economic and religious history. Great Britain did not undertake to govern India as a public function, but as the Romans farmed out the collection of the taxes and as Americans (the last of the great nations to do so) are still farming out the proper government functions of transporting our citizens and of furnishing them with electricity and gas, so Great Britain undertook to allow a private company, a group of capitalists, to govern India, to collect the taxes for Great Britain and to be the middlemen between the British government and the people of India. These indirect relations between the British government and the people of India came to a terrible, tragic end, just as such experiments are always bound to end, sooner or later. So great was the scandal of the government of India by the East India Company that the distinguished men of Great Britain, men whom the world respects, men whose names will live as long as history, men whose living together and serving together will make the House of Commons of their day the greatest parliamentary body the world has ever known—these men, with the support of an overwhelming majority of the House of Commons, were obliged to impeach Warren Hastings as the head and front of the iniquities perpetrated by the East India Company, to whom the British government had foolishly farmed out the government functions in India. The younger Pitt, then prime minister; Edmund Burke, one of the world's four greatest orators; Charles James Fox, probably the greatest parliamentary debater among the English-speaking people, and Sheridan, the great Irish orator, were appointed by the House of Commons to prepare the evidence and present the arguments against Warren Hastings.

Edmund Burke opened the trial with the severest indictment against human iniquity in our language. We shall quote and comment upon parts of Burke's speech. Consider what Burke said about the way in which the farming out of proper government functions DISTRACTS public attention, embroils the public servants in endless controversy and confusion, and tends to prevent the real progress of the people toward higher and better things. At the very beginning of his speech Burke discusses this phase of the situation:

With very few intermissions, the affairs of India have constantly engaged the attention of the Commons for more than fourteen years. We may safely affirm that we have tried every mode of legislative protection before we had recourse to anything of penal process. It was in the year 1774 we framed an act of Parliament for the remedy to the then existing disorders in India, such as the then information before us enabled us to enact. Finding that the act of Parliament did not answer all the ends that were expected from it, we had, in the year 1782, recourse to a body of monitory resolutions. Neither had we in this the expected fruit from them. When, therefore, we found that our inquiries and our reports, our laws and our admonitions, were alike despised; that the enormities increased in proportion as they were forbidden, detected and exposed; when we found that guilt studied with an accurate and upright front, and that legal authority seemed to skulk and hide its head like outlawed guilt; when we found that some of those very persons who were appointed by Parliament to assert the authority of the laws of this kingdom were the most forward, the most bold and the most active in the conspiracy for their destruction, then it was time for the justice of the nation to recollect itself. To have forborne longer would have been patience, but collusion; it would have been participation with guilt; it would have been to make ourselves accomplices with the criminal.

The AMERICAN will in a few days quote some more of the charges which the British House of Commons, always ONE of the greatest parliamentary bodies of the world, and then THE greatest parliamentary body in the world, made against the performance by private capitalists of a government function in India. After years of attempts by regulation to prevent the evil of private management of public functions in India, the British government despaired of regulation as a remedy and at last abolished the East India Company and took over its functions as a public operation, just as the British government has taken over the railroads which had been farmed out to private operation; just as the British municipalities have taken over their street railways, gas companies and electric light companies, and as the people of the other great countries of the world are taking over and operating these quasi-public corporations which have been too long performing government functions; just, too, as the United States government has at last taken over the railroads.

America has been the most backward of all the great nations in this great economic, social and political advancement, but we have now taken over the railroads as a war measure, and we shall never return them to private managers and exploiters. San Francisco has taken its street railway. Many of our cities are acquiring their electric light companies, and Boston is about to take over its big street railway.

We shall, at a later date, show how in every country, in every period and under every kind of social, political and economic conditions, the same abuses creep in whenever public functions are given over to private management.

The Old Clubman Had a Gay Time in His Day, But He Is Paying for It Now

By Winifred Black

THE Clubman says he feels old.

Worse than that, he looks it.

And, even worse than either of these things, he knows he looks it —and it's a tragedy.

He's always been a good deal of a comedy—The Clubman. He made up his mind years and years ago that he wasn't going to take things seriously, and so he looked upon existence as a kind of a game, and as long as he won once in a great while he didn't mind what the stakes were, how the game was played or what it was all about.

He was a great dancer, and a famous story-teller, and no one could mix a salad dressing like he, and no one could sing in the chorus of a rollicking song with the gusto he could put into it.

He had no ties of his own, so he was always ready for a week-end or a long motor trip, or for a yachting party, or a tramp into the woods fishing.

He was a great fellow to camp out, they say—such bacon as he could cook over the fire, and such trout as he caught, and such stories as he told around the camp fire, and the songs he sang in the starlight—it was really a great mistake to have any kind of an outing party without my friend, The Clubman.

Never "Capitulated"

He knew just where to get the nicest luncheons, and how to make sandwiches, and where there was a stream that would keep any bottle in the world ice cold till it was time to open it. And he was never in a hurry, and always had plenty of time.

There was always a girl or two somewhere in the background, and usually a widow in the foreground, a rich widow with a fine house and a smart establishment and plenty of friends, and really a great need for just such a man as The Clubman in the entourage.

Every one liked him, and every one said how clever he was—what a quick wit, and so cynical, too! The girls admired him tremendously, and the older women made a great fuss over him—but he never capitulated to their charms, really.

Not he! He'd seen enough of that—some good fellow tying himself up to little Miss Sweet-and-Nothing, and the first thing you knew broken for life, with a family to look after and bills to pay and all the joy gone out of everything.

Children? Oh, they were all very well, as a picturesque accessory to a picnic, or to be told stories to in the gloaming or to have a Christmas tree for, or to take to the circus—but for real life, no, thank you, not for him! Such a nuisance when they were little, and always growing up so fast and betraying the age of their parents.

Out of It Now

So The Clubman laughed and sang, and toasted and stirred his way through life. And he made the other men look like plodders —dull, everyday chaps with nothing to do but work and worry. But now—

Now The Clubman looks old and feels old and he knows it, and he knows that every one else knows it, and I can't help being sorry for him.

Poor Clubman! No wonder he feels old and useless and out of it in these stirring times.

GARRETT P. SERVISS' ARTICLE

The Nature and Uses of Liquid Gas Are Almost Valueless Except to Scientists

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Please explain liquid gas: its uses; how it may be applied.—S. F. and T. G."

ANY substance may appear in any of three different forms, or states, viz.; solid, liquid or gaseous. A "liquid gas" is simply some substance which under ordinary conditions appears as a gas but which, under different conditions, artificially produced, takes the form of a liquid.

To turn a gas into a liquid two things are needed—lowering of temperature and increase of pressure. The result of the application of these is to bring the molecules of the gas closer together into the liquid state, where they cease to fly freely about among one another, but, so to speak, cling together in a manner which enables them to flow in any direction without becoming separated and without expanding on all sides. The total volume of a liquid remains practically constant whatever shape it may assume when poured from one vessel to another or when allowed to escape, but a gas expands without limit unless it is in some way confined.

Retain Place

When the temperature is still farther lowered and the pressure increased the liquid is changed into a solid, its molecules being brought so close together, and being so far deprived of their vibratory motion (which is an effect of the form of energy that we usually call heat), that they hold one another, as it were, in a rigid embrace, each keeping a fixed place with regard to all the others.

Some gases, such as sulphurous acid and nitrous acid, are easily liquified, but oxygen, nitrogen, hydrogen and others require extreme cold, together with high pressure, in order to be forced into the liquid state. However, even air, which consists of a mixture of oxygen and nitrogen, together with relatively small quantities of other gases, has been successfully liquefied in large quantities. For this purpose it is necessary not only to confine the air under high pressure, but to extract its heat by means resembling in principle those used for producing artificial ice until it sinks to a point nearly 300 degrees below zero. To liquefy hydrogen a temperature more than 400 degrees below zero is required.

Scientific Use

The uses and applications of liquefied gases are almost exclusively scientific, i. e., they are employed for experimental research concerning the nature and properties of matter. Liquid air is largely used in the laboratory as an "analytic agent." For instance, suppose that it is desired to investigate the constituents of a mixed gas. By subjecting the entire mixture to the influence of liquid air all the constituents which can be more easily condensed than air can will turn to liquid and in that state can be separated out.

If there are other constituents less easily condensible than air they will remain in the gaseous state and can be dealt with separately by subjecting them to the still lower temperature obtainable with the aid of liquid hydrogen. As liquid air can be kept for considerable periods of time in receptacles made on the thermos bottle plan, it serves admirably as an agent for producing great lowering of temperature in substances whose change of properties at low temperatures is to be investigated.

REPUTATIONS ARE EASILY WRECKED, DONALD

By Elizabeth Jordan

Dear Miss Jordan—Please write an article about reputation. Tell us what it means and how much it counts for. DONALD B.

YOUR reputation, Donald, is the general estimate held of you by those who know you or know about you.

Long ago one William Shakespeare told us the value of reputation. No one has since bettered his words, and I cannot answer your question more helpfully than by quoting what he said:

"Good name, in man or woman, dear, my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls.
Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;
But he that filches from me my good name
Robs me of that which not enriches him
And leaves me poor, indeed."

Here's another quotation, this time from an up-to-date source. A certain well-known captain of industry was speaking to me of a vacancy in his office.

"Blank applied for the place," he said. "In most respects he is the ideal man for it. He has exactly the experience and the ability we are looking for. But, of course, I couldn't take him."

I knew very well why he couldn't take Blank, but I did not wish to admit that I knew. So I asked the question. The captain of industry grinned understandingly as he answered:

"Because he has the reputation of being the best-hated man in New York," he said. "Because every good man I've got would kick against working with him."

Blank, you see—had two reputations—equally deserved. He was known to be an extremely able man in his line of work. Unfortunately for him, he was also known to be intensely disliked by his associates.

The reason for Blank's unpopularity was understood by any one who talked to him for five minutes. His manner was most unfortunate. He put on what men call "side." He was as vain as a peacock.

A point to remember, Donald, is that to an appalling degree our reputations are all at the mercy of our associates. With a nod or a raised eyebrow they can do us more injury than any personal blow could inflict.

Facts About M. S. G.

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

As there has been for some time and is at present in certain circles a great amount of criticism of the Massachusetts State Guard as a military body, it may be well for those who criticise to get wise to a few facts, as follows.

1—That the M. S. G. is entirely a volunteer body.

2—That its members realize when they enlist that it does not exempt them from the draft if between twenty-one and thirty-one years of age.

3—That a majority of its members would welcome active service at once if the federal government should decide to use them.

4—That the commissioned and non-commissioned officers of this body are giving several nights each week to instructing the boys who expect to be called into the new National Army.

5—That above-mentioned officers are doing this without remuneration to themselves.

6—That in a great many cases the boys who have taken advantage of this instruction have been appointed non-commissioned officers upon their arrival at camp.

In addition to the above, kindly permit the writer to relate a personal experience of his. Recently while on a business trip to New York city I noted great activity on the streets as the State military authorities were attempting to get 600 men to enlist in the New York State Guard to build up that body to 2,000 men in New York city, and they admitted that they were having a hard time to do it, this out of a population estimated at 7,000,000, while Massachusetts with about one-half that number of people has mustered between 11,000 and 12,000 men in the State Guard, or about 4,000 more than the military authorities of this State desire.

So here are three cheers for the good old Bay State, and also let us hope that Uncle Sam finds a place to use the M. S. G. in the near future, so that it may have a chance to show its true worth.

LOVELESS MARRIAGE IS NOT HOLY

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

"DEAR Mrs. Woodrow:

"Tell me, please, if it is wrong for a girl to refuse to marry the man to whom she is engaged because she has discovered that the feeling she has for him is nothing more than friendship, and not love at all.

"The thought of remaining single all my life is unbearable. I am extremely fond of children, and to think of spending the remainder of my life absolutely alone is not to be endured. Yet I feel the latter would be a far more satisfactory life than to marry some one I do not love. I try hard to be cheerful and to feel that there may still be some happiness for me; but it seems to me my sun has set and there is nothing but darkness before me. It is because I cannot forgive myself that I come to you for a word of cheer and advice."

Everybody at heart wants to do the very best that he can with his life. But most of us are so busy looking this way and that in the hope of discovering a short cut to felicity that we quite ignore the plain and simple path of common sense.

In fiction there are just so many situations. The art of modern fiction lies in getting a new angle on an old theme. One of these situations which has been subjected to the hardest kind of wear is that of the girl about to marry the man she does not love.

Two reasons are usually presented for her doing so. The first and favorite one is what may be classified as the family reason. Either father's fortune has been swept away, or brother has forged a note, or sister has some dark secret in her past which must be kept concealed at any cost, or mother has some incurable ailment. And the only way the family skeleton, whatever it may be, can be kept safely in the closet is for the heroine to marry the unloved man. The rest of the story is that the unloved man either dies at just the right minute, or else he wins the affections of his unloved wife.

Another Reason

The other reason for contracting the unwelcome marriage is a high sense of honor in the girl which prompts her to keep her plighted word at any cost to herself.

Starting out with either premise, the fiction writer can build up a long novel. It has been done very, very frequently. The long arm of coincidence can be used to jerk a lot of events into place, and wind them up neatly. And there's your happy ending. A fiction heroine would be foolish not to go on following the good, old pattern, because, no matter what she does, things will always turn out so pleasantly for her.

But life is different and more exciting. One never knows just what may happen next. From the standpoint of fiction, the fiction heroine is all right; but from the standpoint of life, she has always struck me as not only featherheaded, but uncommonly vain.

For instance, when the family units in trying to force her to marry the unloved man it would be so much more sensible for her to say:

The Writer's Way

"You got yourself into these difficulties, and it's high time you used your wits and your energies in getting yourself out, instead of offering me up as a sacrifice. I am quite willing to work and to do all that I can to help in the present emergency, but I am distinctly not for sale."

But the fiction heroine never dreams of doing that. She is too feather-headed.

And she is vain in this, that she imagines that her grudging and unresponsive presence is sufficient return for a man's lifelong devotion and perpetual maintenance of her.

As a matter of fact, the human being does not live who wants to be closely associated with any one who feels either dislike or indifference to him.

Although this man for whom you do not care may feel wounded and hurt, when you tell him that you do not love him enough to marry him, there will be enough chagrin mingled with his disappointment to help him get over it very nicely.
